B.C. Hydro Picket Line Halts Jordan River Work

Striking B.C. Hydro electricians today set up pickets at their Jordan River work site, halting work on dam and construction projects as about 130 other tradesmen respected the pickets.

The electricians, striking for higher wages, were also out at Prince George, where about 100 line maintenance personnel, communication technicians, servicemen and other staff did not work.

The Jordan River pickets were set up at 6:30 a.m. today, affecting work at the Elliot dam, Jordan River dam and a generating station project. Construction workers were most affected by the pickets.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the union representing the electricians, is conducting a series of rotating strikes to further their pay demands. Negotiations with B.C. Hydro broke off late last week.

Burnaby was the first centre hit, when workers stayed off Wednesday. Workers at Jordan River and Williams Lake stayed off Thursday.

NOT UNION MEN

IBEW president Tom Forkin said today from Vancouver that loggers and truckers at Jordan River, who are not union men, respected the pickets.

He said the workers at Prince George were mainly concerned with maintenance on the power system but would not reveal if the strike would continue at Prince George Monday.

Forkin said the Jordan River electricians would "likely be back at work on Monday."

FURTHER ORDERS

However, John Hiebert, local union spokesman at Jordan River, said he was awaiting further orders from union headquarters.

"At the present time, it's the one-day deal," he said. "But it could very likely run the weekend."

"We're awaiting orders from the other end," he said. B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said Thursday night the spot strikes had not affected service and that no negotiations had been set up between the two parties.

He said the efforts of an independent arbitrator would be futile, as mediator Clark Gilmour, whom he described as "one of the best in the business," had not been able to settle the dispute.

Hydro has offered a 21.75 per cent increase over three years, approximately seven per cent per year.

The union says it lowered its demands to 18½ per cent over two years, or about nine per cent per year.

Shrum said, "My position is perfectly clear. These employees are already the mandarins of our work force, the highest paid of them all."

"They would remain the highest paid with only a modest increase in their contract," he said. "The seven per cent offer would put them still further ahead. That is why we can't afford to give them more than we have given other unions at Hydro in recent negotiations."

Hydro electricians are now paid $9.39 hourly.

ONTARIO Premier William Davis today withdrew his request for discussion of economic problems at the June 14-16 Victoria talks after the federal government agreed to an Ottawa meeting of provincial finance ministers in July to discuss the June 15 budget.

NATO BACKS CANADA IDEA FOR E. EUROPEAN ENVOY

LISBON (CP) — A two-day meeting of NATO foreign ministers ended today with an indication of general support for a Canadian recommendation that a special envoy be appointed to evaluate recent Soviet proposals for mutual East-West force reductions in Europe.

The ministers qualified their support in a communique by stating that such an envoy should be named only if it becomes clear that the move would be effective in clarifying Soviet intentions.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada had hoped for a somewhat more rapid appointment.

The meeting also agreed to a United States call for a special NATO conference of deputy foreign ministers—probably in September—to discuss details of possible talks with the Soviet-led Warsaw pact on force reductions. Ministers expressed the intention to move to negotiations as soon as practicable.

Regular diplomatic channels should be used for the time being to assess Soviet motives, the communique said. Results of these exploratory contacts would be examined at the special meeting in Brussels.

NO IMMEDIATE STEP

Sources say the appointment of an envoy would probably take place some time after the Brussels conference if this appeared necessary.

Following exploratory discussions, the communique said, the alliance is prepared to work out the time, place, arrangements and agenda for East-West talks. Sources say the appointment of a special representative to Eastern Europe depends largely on whether this method of consultation would be acceptable to the Russians.

No names had been mentioned in connection with the appointment of an envoy, sources said. Manlio Brosio, retiring NATO secretary-general, has been mentioned unofficially as a possible appointee to the position.

The communique also appears to rule out a European security conference called for by the Soviet Union, until a satisfactory conclusion is reached in four-power talks on Berlin.

This decision follows closely a report on the Berlin situation presented to the meeting

10,000 BIRDS KILLED BY MAJOR OIL SLICK

LERWICK, Scotland (AP) — An oil slick floating off the Shetland Islands may have killed 10,000 sea birds, experts estimated today.

Dr. William Bourne of Aberdeen University said 1,000 bodies of oil-contaminated birds had been found but "much of the isolated cliff coastline has not been searched and the figure could be as high as 10,000."

Most of the dead birds were razorbills, puffins and gulliemots.

Major Wheat Sale To Russia Signed

Immediate Shipping Start

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A new sale of 81,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat to Russia for approximately $145 million was announced today.

In addition, Russia will take another 38,400,000 bushels under terms of the 1966 contract and an option to buy 10 million more bushels in 1972.

The whole package is up to 130 million bushels for a maximum $235 million.

Canadian and Soviet representatives signed a contract in the Senate reading room.

Immigration Minister Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, announced the contract in the Commons soon after the signing.

Delivery of the wheat will begin this month and continue through 1972. The major portion will be shipped during the rest of this year and the early part of next.

Mr. Lang and Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said in a joint statement that the sale involves two contracts.

The first is for 38,400,000 bushels to complete the outstanding purchase obligation under the 1966 Canada-Russia wheat agreement.

The second covers 81,500,000 bushels, an additional sale.

Of the total, 350,000 tons will be shipped in the form of flour.

The first contract amount will be shipped this year, the second this year and next.

OPTION TO BUY MORE

Russia has the option to purchase a further 250,000 metric tons for shipment during May-July next year.

Shipments will be made from both Pacific and Eastern ports. Russia will have the option of taking some of the shipments through Churchill, Man., during the 1971 navigation season.

The sale of the 81.5 million bushels is considerably less than other sales to Russia in the past, the biggest being the 1963 Canada-Russia pact for 487 million bushels.

COMPLETES 1966 PACT

Then in 1966, Russia contracted to buy 330 million bushels during a three-year period. At the end of three years 128 million bushels remained to be bought under the agreement.

On Dec. 15, 1969, the Russians agreed to buy the remaining 128 million bushels—worth about $200 million at the time.

Mr. Lang said then that about 75 million would be delivered before the end of 1970 with the remaining 53 million to be delivered before the end of 1971.

CASE OF BEER MAY COST $3.15

If B.C. breweries have their way, the province's beer drinkers could be hit by another 25-cent a case increase on top of the recently announced 20-cent a case government increase.

This would put the price of beer at $3.15 a case.

Don McDougall, vice-president of Labatt's B.C. Ltd., said Thursday that the breweries were disappointed not to receive any of this week's 20-cent government increase.

He said Labatt's is reviewing its whole pricing system, adding that the breweries have been able to keep their prices down by increasing plant efficiency.

"I don't think we can do this much longer," he said.

Prince George brewer Ben Ginter said Thursday the major brewers have approached him about a price hike. "They have been feeling me out to know if I'd go along with a price increase," he said.

Spokesmen for Carlings and Canadian breweries also said prices are being reviewed by their companies but no application has yet been made to the B.C. Liquor Control Board for an increase.

Ginter said brewers are giving greatly increased labor costs as the reason for wanting the price increase.

U.S. Jobless Total For May Hits 6.2%

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Unemployment in the United States rose to 6.2 per cent last month, matching last December's nine-year high.

It compared with 6.1 per cent in April and left 4,394,000 persons out of jobs, compared with 3,384,000 for the same period a year ago.

Since December the jobless level has fluctuated between 5.8 per cent and 6.2 per cent, but the trend has been upwards for the last three months.

THREE CARS DROP INTO CREVICE; 2 DEAD

LYTTON (CP) — A man and woman were killed and five persons injured today when three cars dropped into a 40-foot crevice on Highway 12, nine miles east of Lillooet. No names were released.

An RCMP spokesman said the cars apparently drove into the crevice after 150 feet of roadway gave way and slid down an embankment. The third car involved was an RCMP cruiser.

The spokesman said the policeman escaped injury and the other injuries were not serious.

Nixon To Free Oil Flow

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon said today the United States is "prepared to move promptly to permit Canadian crude oil to enter the U.S. on an unlimited basis. But there appeared to be some strings attached to the idea.

Putting the presidential seal of approval on some form of continental policy, the president said "the time has come to develop further this mutually advantageous trading relationship" in energy. To some observers the suggestion seemed, as one put it, "the same old story," although it now has been given the prestige of presidential endorsement. Canadian officials have shied away from the continental energy idea under which there would be a virtually unlimited across-the-border exchange of energy from many sources.

Actually the president's brief remarks on Canada took only about 100 words in a 4,000-word message to Congress advocating a whole range of long-term and short-term policies to promote "clean energy" in the future.

READY TO PROCEED

Referring to the "mutually advantageous trading relationship" in energy, the president added:

"The United States is therefore prepared to move promptly to permit Canadian crude oil to enter this country free of any quantitative restraints, upon agreement as to measures needed to prevent citizens of both our countries from being subjected to oil shortages, or threats of shortages. We are ready to proceed with negotiations and we look to an early conclusion."

Although Nixon did not mention the continental concept, administration officials made it clear they were talking beyond mere oil imports.

Asked if the president's wording implied U.S. dissatisfaction with the pace of Canada-U.S. talks on oil and other energy sources, a high U.S. official said:

"I'm not going to address myself to that except to say we feel the talks could go forward much faster."

REQUEST MORE FUNDS

Nixon said he will seek from Congress appropriations to speed up programs to increase the United States' energy supply.

These programs would emphasize development of new offshore oil, geothermal power, oil shale, coal gasification and atomic plants.

He called for an additional $27 million to accelerate research on a "liquid metal fast breeder reactor" with the goal of constructing a demonstration plant by 1980.

An additional $5 million will be requested, he said, toward the construction of the plant itself.

Federal officials told reporters in a briefing that achievement of commercial energy production from the new generation of atomic plants probably would cost the government some $2 billion over a decade, and private industry later would have to invest perhaps three times that much in plants.

More Investment By Japan Seen

Leaders of a Japanese economic mission to Canada today appeared pleased with their government's decision to permit more investment abroad.

Japan Motives For Investing Explained

VANCOUVER (CP) —

Chujiro Fujino, leader of a Japanese economic mission to Canada, said Thursday that he thinks there is some misconception in Canada about the extent of Japan's Canadian investments and, possibly, about the expectation and reasons for future investment.

He told a meeting of the Vancouver board of trade and the Canada-Japan Society of Vancouver that there is no reason to fear Japanese control or domination of British Columbia's natural resources or resource industries.

RAW MATERIALS

"The intention of Japanese business," he said, "is principally to assure the supply of raw materials and, progressively, semi-finished products in keeping with Canadian policy. Investments for profits has not been the motivation."

The 14-man mission was to meet with B.C. government officials today and will move on to Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Ottawa, Quebec, Montreal and Toronto.

Fujino said the total Japanese investment in Canada is only about $200 million, most in the form of loans. He estimated that $40 million is in direct or equity investment.

SELL HARDER

Fujino said Canadian businessmen must sell harder if they want a larger share of the vast Japanese market.

"President of the giant Mitsubishi Corporation, he said more Canadian businessmen should visit Japan to study their market first-hand."

"Japan has to do more selling," he said, "but the Canadians will have to do very much more."

Japan depends upon trade for 10 to 15 per cent of its gross national products but Canada's trade runs between 20 and 25 per cent of Canada's GNP, he said.

MUCH HIGHER

"So your involvement in trade is very much higher," Fujino said there are a number of areas in which Canada could increase its sales of finished products to Japan.

"Your businessmen should come to Japan and see what products are being imported from other countries and see if they can compete. They will find domestic competitors too and they could see if they can co-operate with them to increase Canada's trade."

The advance party of a 14-man delegation was informed of the development in Tokyo as they stepped from their chartered aircraft in Victoria Harbor, pausing only long enough to agree the decision could lead to greater Japanese investment in Canada.

Mission leader Chujiro Fujino and five others rushed into a waiting limousine for protocol visits at Government House, city hall and the premier's office.

The B.C. government was host at a Union Club luncheon and the mission was to leave Victoria about 4:30 p.m. for visits to the Prairies and eastern Canada.

Fujino, who is president of Mitsubishi Corp., was not overly concerned by the current Canadian trend to nationalism.

DINNER SPEECH

He had noted in a dinner speech at Vancouver Thursday that Japanese investment here had come partly as a result of demand by Canadian corporations.

The Japanese government earlier today concluded an eight-point program to liberalize completely Japan's overseas investments, hopefully to cope with rising pressure to revalue the yen.

The cabinet council of economic ministers also said the measures were designed to meet rising criticism overseas of Japan's foreign trade policy.

The eight measures were:

- Stepped up liberalization of imports.
- Enforcement of preferential tariffs for developing nations possibly from Aug. 1.
- Accelerating of cuts in import tariffs.
- Promotion of capital investments, including further promotion of inward investments and complete liberalization of outgoing investment.
- Progress in the elimination of non-tariff trade barriers.
- Promotion of foreign economic aid.
- A review of export promotion tax reliefs and introduction of orderly marketing.
- Flexible manipulating of fiscal and monetary policies.

LAKE TRAFFIC CAN TURN LEFT

Traffic northbound on the Pat Bay Highway wanting to turn left into Beaver Lake Park now has a turn lane.

A highways department crew added the lane Thursday without paving a foot.

The two lanes for southbound traffic, which had merged just south of the park entrance, now merge just north of it. This freed enough highway to install the left turn lane.

Before the change, a double white line made it illegal to turn left, forcing motorists to drive further north, turn into a residential street, then turn around and come south on the highway to get into the park.

The present highway will be replaced in about two months in that section by the new Patricia Bay Freeway just to the East, leaving the existing highway as a frontage road to be known as Elk Lake Drive.

... NATO

Thursday by French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann, who is skeptical about the possibility of troop reduction talks, dissociated himself from those sections of the communiqué dealing with force cuts as France has done for the last several years.

PROGRESS HOPED FOR

The communiqué said progress towards a settlement of the Berlin issue now appears possible and expressed the hope that the question would be resolved before the next foreign ministers' meeting in Brussels in December.

If a settlement was reached, the December meeting would take up the possibility of multilateral conversations leading to a security conference.

The communiqué said Soviet proposals on force reductions required clarification.

The communiqué emphasized the need for agreement on Berlin on three major points:

—Unhindered movement of goods and people between West Germany and West Berlin.

—Improved opportunities for movement by residents of West Berlin.

—Respect for the special relationship which has developed between the Western sectors of Berlin and West Germany.

Sharp told a news conference Thursday that he would be happy with the choice of NATO Secretary-General Manlio Brosio of Italy, who is retiring from the NATO post.

OUTLINES APPROACH

Sharp called for a three-phase approach to talks on troop reductions consisting of an exploratory visit to East Europe by a Western envoy, the establishment of a framework for talks and finally actual negotiations.

Canada will not oppose a special NATO meeting of deputy foreign ministers to discuss the troop reduction issue in greater detail.

Sharp said, however, that such a meeting might create the impression that NATO was uncertain how to proceed. This was not the case since the Western alliance had first proposed troop cuts in 1968.

Rogers told the two-day NATO ministerial council meeting, which ends today, that if NATO showed itself purposeful in seeking acceptable force reductions, the Nixon administration would be better able to resist pressure at home for unilateral troop cuts in Europe.

Sources said all countries in the alliance with the exception of France, Portugal and Greece appear to favor proceeding with a NATO-Warsaw pact round of discussions on mutual, balanced troop reductions.

CHALLENGES SHARP

Rogers challenged Sharp's statement that Prime Minister Trudeau during his Soviet visit had been given the impression that the Russians were extremely serious in their proposal on troop reductions. If this was the case, said Rogers, why had the Soviet not outlined their plans in detail to Trudeau?

Sharp said the Russians may have been reluctant to do so because they are awaiting the appointment of NATO representative to deal with the matter.

Canadian sources said Sharp is reluctant to endorse the call for a special meeting also because Canada does not have a political deputy secretary for foreign affairs as many countries do.

Chabot Meets Unions; Talks Said 'Useful'

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Labor Minister James Chabot met top trade union officials Thursday in what he described later as an attempt to gain a better understanding of labor.

Attending the meeting were representatives of the B.C. Federation of Labor, B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Both Chabot and union officials described the seven-hour meeting as useful and worthwhile.

Chabot said the meeting was "very friendly and cordial" and expected there would be more meetings.

'SENSE OF HUMOR'

Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said Chabot "has a sense of humor. He's got the potential — and that's as far as I'll go — to solve some of the problems on B.C.'s labor scene."

He said most of the conversation was general, with Chabot listening and asking questions on a variety of topics. Labor gave its views on Bill 33 including compulsory arbitration.

"He asked us questions about jurisdictional disputes, the four-day 40-hour week. All of the conversation was very general. The most important thing is he expressed a desire for further meetings to talk about specific problems."

He could not recollect such a meeting in the past with a minister of labor.

Of Chabot, he said "he seems very interested and very eager to hear our views. I think he felt it was worthwhile and we do too."

Vatican 'Comes of Age'

The Vatican published a new document of guidelines relating to the communications media Wednesday and Bishop Remi de Roo of Victoria suggested Thursday a number of the objectives had already been reached in Canada.

The pastoral instruction for worldwide use and approved by Pope Paul marks a coming of age in the attitude of the church toward the media, said a statement by the communications committee of the U.S. Catholic Conference.

The 20,000-word document was in preparation for more than six years in response to Vatican II's decree on social communications.

The instruction says: "Since the media are often the only channels of information that exist between the church and the world, a failure to use them amounts to burying the talents given by God."

The Vatican defended freedom of the press but denounced sensationalism and the invasion of privacy. It also admonished readers and audiences of theatre, television and radio to be more prudent in selecting their fare.

The 82-page document designed as a guideline for newsmen, entertainers and advertisers, called for more honesty, sincerity and truthfulness in the communications media.

Viewers and listeners should exercise self-control, the paper said.

FREE ACCESS

"They must not allow themselves to be so guided by the charms of the media's products or by the curiosity they arouse so that the people neglect urgent duties or simply waste time."

It defended the right of individuals and organizations to seek and to distribute information and their right to free access to the media. But it warned there is "a right of privacy that protects the private lives of families and individuals."

The document cautioned journalists not to make the news "sensational in such a way that they risk distorting it."

At the same time, it said the people have a duty to sort fact from fiction and to fill gaps in the reportage by reading background material.

The document paid tribute to the dedication and bravery of many newsmen.

"At times they risk their lives and indeed a number of them have been killed in this line of duty," the document said, and went on to condemn the use of violence against newsmen.

Bishop de Roo said the document represents nothing really new in Canada

"because we already have a very good working understanding with the media."

"Here in Canada we speak of not only making use of the media but we also stress the responsibility of Christians and the church to serve the media and the people in the communications field."

Serving means helping them in their search for truth and co-operating with them in working out the deeper values which lie behind use of the media at a time of cultural and social transition like now, he said.

The church can make an important contribution by co-operating in the search for the new values necessary for our modern world.

De Roo said in Canada there is already a working arrangement at the national level between the three major churches — United, Anglican and Roman Catholic — and the media.

I've got this thing about trails — hiking trails. Despite being designed more for stability than mobility, I like to walk. Trails mean walking, and new trails — trails I've never been over before — mean new things to see. So everytime I hear about another trail I make a mental note in my "things to be done someday" (TFBDS) account.

It's an account that's not likely to be overdrawn for some time. Victoria — the whole Saanich Peninsula for that matter — is about as well endowed with trails as anywhere in Canada and at my speed, I've got years of walking ahead of me.

I did make a withdrawal from the TFBDS account this week — one that's been drawing interest for about two months. Back in March, I noticed a small, inconspicuous sign on the north side of Brookleigh Road north of Elk Lake. It's a message was simple and direct: "Trail to Summit" with an arrow pointing to what seemed like impenetrable bush.

DIE CAST

Doing a little research on summits, I found this one — Bear Hill — was only about 700 feet up, well within my limits. The die was cast. Sooner or later this was one summit I'd reach.

It was evening grosbeaks, eight of them, that finally brought this Bear Hill trail and Hoshford together. These big black, white and yellow finches are unpredictable blokes, sometimes not being seen in the Victoria area for months, only to show up in large flocks for a few weeks before disappearing again. This spring they've been seen three or four times north of Mount Douglas.

SUCCEDED

It was homeward bound after a successful hunt for the grosbeaks when I found myself on Brookleigh again. This time when the little sign beckoned, I succumbed.

Two months of anticipation were almost wiped out in the first few hundred yards on the trail. I don't know what I'd been expecting but it certainly wasn't heaps of rusting cans and derelict cars at every turn. But I pressed on, spurred by the prospect of what might lie ahead.

Disappointment soon gave way to excitement when a ruffed grouse exploded from the base of a tree near the path and went into a wild abandoned act which, if I hadn't been forewarned,

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

would have convinced me the bird had flipped its lid.

But all this flopping, hissing and chucking was nothing more than the frantic efforts of a mother grouse trying to lure an intruder from either her nest or her family.

I found no nest nor did any tiny brown balls of fluff reveal themselves. But you can bet that somewhere in that tangle of huckleberry and ocean spray there were several pairs of bright eyes, their owners frozen where they stood by a signal from their mother and waiting her all-clear before revealing themselves.

First to move, I left the mother and her unseen brood and began a gentle ascent that took me through the dark gloom of a mature stand of Douglas Fir and into a clearing golden with broom.

But the summit beckoned and it wasn't far off — or they weren't far off — for I found that there were, in reality several summits on Bear Hill and each one worth the trip.

On the east one rock outcrop gave a spectacular view of the lower Gulf Islands, Haro Strait and Mount Baker. Farther on, to the north, a patchwork of the neat fields of Central Saanich were spread like a green quilt.

Bear Hill trail is short — not much more than a mile round trip — an easy climb and one the whole family can enjoy. But be prepared for an irate mother grouse.

The Two-Way Street

IN THESE DAYS WHEN THE laws of classical economics seem to have been suspended, and theorists are hard put to rationalize their fiscal, monetary or inflation ideas in the light of confusing reality, among the few traditional principles which still maintain their status is the one which holds that to develop exports a country must encourage imports.

If a nation is to sell its products abroad it must provide its customers with the means to pay for them by purchasing their goods. The trade need not be one-to-one on an even basis; it may be three-sided or multi-lateral. But in the end, and apart from large movements of capital, the import totals must be roughly equivalent to the export totals if viable trade in goods is to be maintained.

Thus, politicians and others who call for greater wheat sales to Japan while seeking to keep Japanese electronic products out of Canada, or industrialists who want to sell lumber to Britain while curbing competition from British textiles, are working against themselves. They are demanding the impossible, and for selfish reasons. Efficient production of goods in which we can achieve an advantageous position is the answer to wider trade, not the taxation of domestic consumers through tariffs or subsidies in order to keep out reasonable foreign competitors.

It was therefore refreshing to hear Premier Bennett come out solidly for the classical approach to trade when he opened the B.C. International Trade Fair in Vancouver this week with wise advice to Canadians to buy abroad in order that we may sell abroad. "Trade must be a two-way street," he said, "you cannot sell if you do not buy."

It was notable that Mr. Bennett listed the products of secondary industry as among the exports British Columbia can offer. It is a sorry fact, however, that almost all of this province's exports are composed of primary products: minerals, oil, lumber, pulp, coal — natural resources which have been very little refined by the work of our hands or our machines.

We leave to the importing nations the technological processing which employs the fuels or the raw materials which we supply; they make the finished products — and reap the chief returns. At the bottom of the economic pyramid of production, the returns from the sale of raw materials are quick but limited, and Canadian profits at this level are being gathered in many cases by foreign investors.

While governments can help domestic industrial development by various means, there is no point in creating industries which cannot stand on their own feet. Perpetual infant industries are no real benefit to the country, whether they live behind subsidies, tax concessions or tariff walls. But certainly there is much more that could be done by the provincial government to encourage the establishment of home-owned secondary industry.

Especially in a time of widespread unemployment is the lack of available manufacturing jobs felt. A factory is a much better place than a welfare building to cope with unemployment. Mr. Bennett should go a step farther to find a way whereby we can produce and sell products with a greater element of our labor in them, rather than pass along our materials to someone more enterprising or better equipped.

From the Back Room

ONE OF THE MOST INFLUENTIAL interest groups in the United States is composed of academics. Called the "Charles River Gang," the group includes professors from Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and is concerned with arms control. The Gang has close links with presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and it provided much of the ammunition for the senatorial assault on the Nixon administration program to construct anti-ballistic missiles.

With regard to the significance of the initial agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union on the limitation of defensive missile systems — with the proviso that there would also be steps to limit offensive weapons — the Harvard and M.I.T. professors are assuming a generally cautious attitude. One of the Gang, though, is quite enthusiastic. Dr. Paul Doty, Jr., of Harvard is willing to bet even money that there will be an agreement on strategic arms this year. Dr. George Kistiakowsky of Harvard, on the other hand, sees the negotiations collapsing "just around election time" and regards the latest understanding as a move on President Nixon's part to please the doves.

With academics playing a continuing political role in United States politics — as presidential advisers, security advisers and other special consultants — it is worth noting the influence of men whose research and opinions will probably be relied on with greater frequency. Although these people are not elected, their voices in important international and domestic matters can be powerful.

FROM OTTAWA

In Moscow, Parliament Was Far Away

By MAURICE WESTERN

PARLIAMENT, by grace of the Conservative opposition, was permitted to spend last Friday discussing the foreign policy of the Trudeau government.

So democracy has been served. Or has it? Ever since 1968, Liberal ministers have been preaching the need for rules reform. The complaint is that the opposition talks too much, denying Parliament an opportunity to make decisions. But in this case, involving a great matter, Parliament was denied the right of decision because the government deliberately blocked the road.

What are the excuses? The first is that the government was under no legal obligation to seek parliamentary approval of the protocol. True enough — and the matter would have been no different if the arrangements had been styled a treaty. Terminology is a matter of diplomatic convenience. A protocol is not necessarily an instrument of minor significance. The famous Geneva Protocol of 1924, adopted by the League assembly, went much further than the abortive draft treaty of mutual assistance and failed of ratification for the very reasons which had made the treaty objectionable to many states.

But a government with any regard for Parliament would, as a matter of propriety, seek approval for a policy initiative of this character.

We come then to the second excuse. This is that the protocol is exactly like earlier protocols and arrangements entered into by the St. Laurent, Diefenbaker and Pearson governments. Many of these were enumerated; the modern substitute for argument being the ministerial snow job.

The point is, however, that these arrangements were all in the context of existing policies. We were already allied with the United States when we entered into the consultative arrangements with them to which Mr. Sharp refers. We were already endeavoring to expand trade and other relations with Japan when agreement was reached on the Canada-Japan ministerial committee.

Anticipation Aroused

It is otherwise with the protocol, which is to be read naturally with the prime minister's commentaries in the course of his Soviet odyssey. Everything about it, including Mr. Trudeau's lecture about independence and the overpowering American presence, is plainly intended to suggest a new departure and to arouse anticipation.

So it was regarded not merely by critics, but also by such elated admirers of the new policy as Prof. James Eayrs. According to him, the prime minister has carried through "a classic foreign policy manoeuvre in the grand tradition." He is a "Canadian calling the old-world into existence to redress the balance of the new." And we now have a "double alignment," which means presumably that we lean in opposite directions at the same time — a neat trick if Mr. Sharp can master it. Or it may mean simply a doublecross, although our unconsulted allies will doubtless be too polite to mention this public.

Now that the prime minister is home, a good deal of water is being added to the wine. Small wonder.

The Parliament that was not consulted has been led up the garden path in other respects. On May 19, in response to John Diefenbaker, who raised the question of the captive peoples, including the Ukrainians, Mr. Sharp assured the House that "the prime minister is taking advantage of his visit to the Soviet Union to discuss all those matters which are of concern to the Canadian people and the matter referred to, by the Rt. hon. member is certainly one of them."

But the prime minister evidently was not in agreement with his foreign minister, since he did nothing of the kind.

On May 21, Jed Baldwin, the Conservative House leader, put a similar question regarding Soviet action in Czechoslovakia. Mr. Sharp said, "I know the prime minister had all these matters on his agenda to take up with the Soviet government and I am sure he did."

But on Monday, the House learned that Mr. Trudeau did not do this either. Possibly we require a protocol to provide for some form of communications between external affairs and the prime minister.

It might have been embarrassing for the government if Mr. Trudeau had mentioned the subject of Czechoslovakia to Messrs. Kosygin and Brezhnev. For the new and structured relations, according to government apologists, are supposed to lead to all sorts of desirable developments. What did Mr. Brezhnev do after talking to the prime minister? He flew to Czechoslovakia to preside over the Prague obscenities and to re-enunciate his doctrine justifying armed intervention in socialist states.

Innocent?

The government, in its own defence, points to the text of the protocol. What could be more innocent? It found this approach helpful on Friday.

But in such matters, textual analysis may be very misleading. Hitler began his attack on the European security system with a non-aggression treaty with Poland. What could be less objectionable than such a pact? For almost four years, it was a staple of his speeches; conclusive proof of his beneficent intentions.

This text, too, must be taken in context. It is a bilateral contract, admittedly negotiated without prior consultation. It is in the train of events which began with our retreat from NATO — which the government indignantly denied was anything of the kind. We are now to study the draft of an economic treaty of the type linking Finland and the U.S.S.R. So there is more to come. But when critical questions are raised, it is never admitted that there is any change of policy. Nor can there be any question of the Soviets driving wedges between the Western allies. Why, they assured Mr. Trudeau — by his own account — that they were not acting against the Americans or against anyone else.

Any more, presumably, than they would think of acting against their Warsaw partners the Czechs.

A second line of argument is that anyone opposed to the protocol must be a partisan of cold war; an enemy of détente; a foe of cultural and scientific exchanges, not to mention wheat sales, Arctic sanitary zones and other good things. Ray Perrault was persuaded: "There are those in this House with dark and lingering fears in their minds that any time Canada achieves an agreement of any kind, that agreement represents so-called sell-out or betrayal of Canada's interests, etc., etc."

Evidently there is no middle ground; one must be for the protocol or a Red-baiter, hysterically seeking to get back to 1947.

This ought to appeal to Messrs. Kosygin and Brezhnev, but it is utter nonsense. We had most of these things without benefit of protocol and practically everyone agrees that we should pursue détente in close consultation and collaboration with our allies. Instead we have chosen to be exhibit A for Mr. Brezhnev; a prize example of how an alliance can be brought to disintegration without concession and with scarcely any effort.

"Projected to its extreme limit," as Mr. Perrault would say, the Trudeau policy will doubtless transform us into a North American Austria. Should this happen, we will doubtless look back with a puzzled realization that at no point did anything of importance change; not at least in any fashion that could be admitted to the Parliament of Canada.

Memories Of Freedom

There will never again be a man as free as Robinson Crusoe was, nor one as free as I was in Canada's North West Territory almost 70 years ago. My address was the South-east quarter of Section 18, Township 51, Range 27, with postoffice and railroad 200 miles away. I was the loneliest and happiest man then in Canada, so I thought and hoped.

Since that time I have actually been biologically remoulded by what is called the industrial revolution, capitalism, really. Long ago my wants were my own invention. I lived on bannock mostly, plus a prairie chicken or a duck occasionally. My abode was a bell tent which harbored a million skeets. One candle lighted it at night. I built a tiny log cabin with nothing but an axe. My team of cayuses hitched to a wagon could take me anywhere for hundreds of miles in any direction, with not a mark in the grass for guidance. I was seriously bothered by absolutely nothing except the weather. My first winter, which lasted seven months, frequently faced me with a prime decision — whether to freeze or starve to death or both.

Yet here I am now, a nonagenarian in perfect health and a slave to progress known as technological, paying out nearly as much money as I get, not in the red because I was once an accountant. My one-time freedom is now so circumscribed that I might as well be in jail. My memory is loaded with numbers which connect me to oppression, to people, to the hell of democratic freedom, and to wondering what the hell next.

What have I learned during this last 70 years as an adult? About life, about love, about heaven and hell, about women (I've been married to the same female for over 65 years), about politics (I've voted in every federal general election, starting in 1904) and about the false needs and wants created by an industrial society?

Plenty. Too much. Enough is too much. My reading of three, or four thousand books leaves me scholastically virginal, so innocent of knowing exactly what and why I am that I might as well have never been born, better, in fact.

At this date I despise myself for allowing other people to control me, not only by law but by the power of capitalism. The interests which dominate my life for their own benefit sugarcoat their repressive plans with the most awful bull that mankind has ever been persuaded to endure.

Putting the thing in a nutshell: This is written on Census day (June 1). Ottawa will soon know all about me and my 92-year-old spouse, — except how much money and other assets we are worth. Our statistics will help Ottawa to do better for Canada and Canadians than it has ever done; how many more schools and jails and hospitals should "be erected; how many more bureaucrats the nation needs; and, probably, what to do about the country's seemingly surplus unemployed, those pitiful adjuncts now being experimented with by the powers which rely for profits solely on consumerism. — Harry Pick, 32260 Hillcrest, Abbotsford.

Letters to the Editor

Inflation Causes

I have yet to read any statement from our elected leaders and representatives, federal, provincial or municipal, on the basic cause of the high unemployment and continuing inflation.

The inflationary wage settlements are the prime cause for the situation in which we, and many other countries, find ourselves today and which forces business to cut staff wherever it can, avoiding replacing staff where possible and keeping capital outlays to a minimum but at the same time having to push prices on everything we eat and use ever higher.

I agree with Paul Hellyer's suggested solution — that is, mandatory wage and price controls — because labor unions have become irresponsible and too powerful. It seems that neither government nor business has the backbone to stand up to them and call a halt — government because of their eye on the labor vote and business because the line of least resistance is to tack the cost on to the selling price of the end product.

It would be refreshing indeed to hear Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Barrett apply the criticism where it belongs instead of calling on the governments to spend ever more public funds in order to create jobs for the unemployed. Let the politicians and the labor unions put the interest of the country first for a change. — A. G. F. Sutton.

Enjoyment and Pride

On May 21, my wife Dorrien and I went to see "Justice Not Revenge" the Victoria Fair entry in Theatre Canada 71 held at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa.

One of the great things in Ottawa is an evening out at this magnificent centre. Here we have seen excellent professional theatre and become accustomed to many high quality performances which have become the hallmark of the NAC.

As former Victorians, it was more from a sense of loyalty than anticipation that we went to see "Justice Not Revenge." The performance was superb. It was really good theatre, by any standard.

Thinking perhaps we had a natural bias toward Victoria and that our judgment might have been influenced in favor of a home town production, we waited for the tough Ottawa drama critics to come out in print. We were delighted with their most favorable comments; "beautifully staged production by Victoria Fair" or "well put together, sustained high quality to the end" or "excellent contribution to Theatre 71."

The new version of Lope de Vega's classic play directed by UVIC's Ralph Allen and Wandale Henshaw may not be everyone's cup of tea but it is first class entertainment. We have seen "Justice Not Revenge" in the glittering National Arts Centre in Ottawa, we recommend it to you in Victoria. — Roderick Clack, Assistant General Manager, National Capital Commission, Ottawa.

Invisible Men

The fact that Mrs. Christie was "the first visible one to walk out" of convocation, adequately confirms something which I have long suspected — it's all these invisible little men who are causing the trouble at UVic. — Charles W. Cowan, lecturer, Department of History, University of Victoria.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"YOU'RE RIGHT MOM, I'M TOO LITTLE TO USE GLUE."

Looking Back

From the Times of June 4, 1911:

Hooch Aye was the all-star motto in the city of Victoria on Saturday, and all those who were so unfortunate either by birth or inclination as to be incapable of giving a spirited rendering to that vocal insignia of Scottish nativity were voted bores or aliens — and the choice was granted with that generous-hearted freedom which is one of Auld Scotia's chiefest characteristics.

Have the Holes Been Plugged?

CANADIANS WILL WATCH with interest the public accounts committee meeting scheduled for next Tuesday in Ottawa to probe a little more deeply into the Bonaventure affair. The intent, according to advance notice, is to see what action has been taken to rectify those conditions which permitted such scandalous waste in refitting the former aircraft carrier shortly before it was sold, at less than one-seventeenth of the refit cost, as scrap.

The degree of wastage in public funds in this case is so great that it becomes imperative to avoid a repetition. When between $16 million and $17 million is thrown away, the Canadian taxpayer is entitled to an assurance that such prodigality with the public purse will not occur again.

Two ministers, Mr. James Richardson (Supply) and Mr. Herb Gray (Revenue) have been summoned to answer questions at the hearing. Their replies should be frank and clear and without political reticence.

Certainly those persons responsible for the waste should be disciplined, but punishment is not the important consideration. The chief task is to ensure that the loose handling of cash has been tightened up, and that dollars which could serve valuable purposes are not again so cynically misdirected.

Student Digits In BA Machines

By ADAM RAPHAEL
Manchester Guardian

The talking head on the television screen dived on and on about variants and variables, watched by some 30 students in the hot, stuffy classroom.

Student 215679000, a girl in blue jeans, her blonde hair in bunches, had fallen asleep across her desk — her male companion, 017423359, picked idly through the pages of a porn magazine.

Degrees of incomprehension about the theory of probability flitted across the bored faces of most of the others.

In similar classrooms, dotted around the campus, the same mathematics lecture was being relayed via closed-circuit television to 800 more undergraduates.

An Orwellian nightmare? No — merely eight o'clock in the morning at the University of Maryland, where I have spent a day sampling mass higher education.

Maryland does not rank with the best of the state colleges nor does it rank with the worst. It is proud of its cyclotron, proud of its open enrolment policy, and proud that it costs the Maryland students only just over $500 a year in college fees.

In the past 10 years, it has had a huge growth, tripling its numbers to more than 38,000, making it the seventh largest in the nation, and rendering inevitable the need for television classes, nine-digit social security identification, and computerized student record cards.

As we drove along University Boulevard, a six-lane highway, in the rush hour that morning, my companion had turned to me: "The biggest hassle here," he said, "is parking. With 15,000 commuters each day, there just aren't enough spaces."

Before his second class at 9 a.m. we picked up a much-needed cup of coffee from a machine. I punched the button marked "Extra cream and sugar," jammed a cap on the plastic carton, and carried it into the biology room.

The television came on again, with a much better picture this time, but most of the students went on talking to each other for several minutes, ignoring the crewcut talking head explaining the genetic mutations of the common garbage fly.

Before Mendel's genetic theories were far advanced, at least three of the class of 30 were fast asleep, oblivious to the young assistant lecturer, dressed in blue jeans and open shirt like his students, whose only function at this class at least appeared to be to turn the television set on and off.

After 45 minutes of tele-

'A cheap way of teaching dunderheads.'

vised garbage fly. I felt I'd had enough so I began leafing through the "Diamondback," the campus newspaper.

The leading story said, "Six arrested in post-rock concert melee... 11 policemen injured." Maryland, like other colleges across the nation, had not forgotten Vietnam, but the days of mass political protests on campus were temporarily over.

Since last May when the National Guard had to be called in twice to stop students blocking a major highway to protest against the Kent State shootings, there had been no trouble.

The hottest current issue now seemed to be the student demand for more together-ness in co-educational dormitories. The university regents recently voted to increase the number of mixed living quarters but ran into opposition from the State Comptroller, who noted sourly: "The University of Maryland is a place of education, not a whorehouse."

The biology class over, the next two hours were spent in the consumption of hamburgers and milk shakes in a vast cafeteria, sleeping off the consequences in the sun.

Afterwards we resumed for an accountancy class which I was assured was taught live. But no sooner had we got into the classroom than alarm sounds began to blare.

"Oh, it's just a bomb scare," said a fellow student as we slowly filed outside. Some of the other classes resumed on the grass outside while the building was searched by campus policemen, but the accountancy professor, a small worried man with hitched-up pants, rapidly summed up the situation and announced he would see us all next week.

Finally the last class of the day began, a course of computer programming. I tried to understand what was going on but the terminology was so far above my head and by then I was so chewed off that I was not impressed by the fact that the class was being taught by a real live lecturer. A middle-aged hippie-type, he spent most of the hour scribbling incomprehensible symbols on to the blackboard.

"It's a cheap way of teaching dunderheads," an assistant professor of a more prestigious faculty remarked when I told him about my experiences later that night.

"America's achievement of offering higher education to anyone who wants it at a price anyone can afford has its undoubted drawbacks. More than 55 per cent of all high school graduates now go on to college but the drop-out rate of nearly two in three indicates that all is far from well."

"When you're treated like an IBM punch card — what can you expect?" said one long-haired student, who described himself as a militant.

Perhaps it's no coincidence that all the major disturbances in the past few years have taken place at vast universities where the students must feel they are digits in a juggernaut machine churning out BAs.

Rushing Ahead With Atom Power

COMMONWEAL

Those who tend to downgrade the threat which nuclear power plants hold to the environment should guard tongues after Charles Luce's annual briefing for the media.

For some time, environmentalists have been pressing the question of thermal pollution and warning that by 1980 — when nuclear power plants will be requiring 200 billion gallons of water per day for cooling purposes — virtually every large fresh water system will have to be tapped to meet the requirement.

The warning has been generally dismissed as another neurosis of ecologists.

So what does Luce reveal? Luce, who is chairman of New York's Consolidated Edison Company, announces that by the 1980s Con Edison will be building its nuclear power stations 10 miles at sea, because by then shoreline and inland plants will have used up all the cooling waters.

The implications are staggering.

This means that just a decade from now nuclear power plants will be about the destruction of the oceans, as now they are in an advance stage of destruction of such priceless water sources as the Hudson River, Lake Michigan, the Connecticut and Ohio Rivers... through thermal pollution.

What thermal pollution does to waters is to change their basic character at distances several miles from the point of cooling-water outflow. The waters are warmed 10 to 20 degrees above normal; water oxygen is dissolved; sea and shoreline plant life altered; fish and animal life are destroyed. There is also the danger of radiation build-up in the cooling source.

If these were the only problems connected with nuclear power plants, it would be reckless to be pushing ahead with their proliferation.

But they're not. There are many more dangers specifically, the possibility of nuclear "accidents," an inevitable increase in man's radiation intake (with increased susceptibility to cancer, leukemia, genetic disturbance, etc.); radiation-element build-ups in food chains; the uncertainties surrounding storage and disposal of radioactive wastes (an earthquake could disturb a nuclear cemetery and set off a devastating nuclear shower).

Bennett's Ad Ban Prophetic

OBSERVER

Premier W. A. C. Bennett merits praise for his ban on cigarette and beverage alcohol advertising.

It was inevitable that he would be clobbered by many of the pundits whose incomes come from the incessant campaigns to persuade more and more young Canadians to smoke more and more cigarettes, and drink more and more beer and booze.

Like the premier we don't object to a man enjoying his drink, or his smoke. But we do object to two things:

The incessant, eternal, tasteless pounding away through all of the mass media urging us to smoke and drink more; and the continuous intrusions on our life identifying with the good and successful that which is wasteful and when used intemperately is destructive to health and happiness.

The United Church has long been completely hostile to the advertising and promotion of beverage alcohol. The findings of recent years regarding cigarettes make us hostile to the promotion of their sale, too.

At the moment Mr. Bennett may be unpopular on this issue, and he may count on having much of the media against him. In five years his action will be recognized as prophetic and courageous.

Next Report on Fraser Will Be an Autopsy

The Fraser River Report, from which I have been quoting this week, is a shattering document. The report, you may recall, was put together by students working on grants last summer. The project was co-ordinated by SPECT.

The man in charge of compiling the information was David Boehm. It is one of the most detailed examinations of the killing of a river ever undertaken.

Yet, for the most part, it has been ignored. When published last December, it raised a brief storm of protests from spokesmen for industry. Surprise! Surprise!

Lands, Forests and Water Resources Minister Ray Wiliston said at the time that he had not yet received the report but that he doubted its value anyway. Surprise! Surprise!

F. R. Bunnell, commissioner of the Greater Vancouver Sewage and Drainage District, stated that no need for secondary treatment of sewage has been found. Surprise! Surprise!

Many companies accused in the report of out-and-out pollution and of exceeding even the allowed limits of effluent-dumping, said they had no comment yet — but they would have something to say after they had studied the report.

They were not heard from again. Surprise! Surprise! The report itself was in effect an organized form of public outcry. And its fate? Well, so far, it has had much more effect than most public outcries. In fact, the report contains a reference to what happens after public outcry has died down...

Talking about overflow from tail mining ponds, the report notes that "lake after lake is filled with millions of tons of extracted ore. Mercury from Cominco gets into Pinchi Lake, serious fish contaminations (the highest recorded mercury concentrations in Canada) are followed by public outcry, government rumblings... then silence.

After all Cominco is a powerful company and the world needs mercury. Will there be cyanide seepage into Francois Lake from Endako molybdenum mine with resulting fish kills? Brynmor mines, Hendrix Lake. Excessive copper in their effluent. Sliming in Boss Creek. Complaints from local populace... silence."

And after the Fraser River Report... silence too.

It was branded as being the work of "greenhorns." By whom? Why, by the very people it was attacking. Industries along the Fraser. Self-centred municipalities which are obsessed with cutting corners on the tax buck and not at all concerned about other municipalities which might be on the receiving end of sewage dumped upstream. And a provincial government whose cabinet contains men who still say that "pollution is the smell of money."

The report contained a couple of miscalculations. It contained as well some statements which were considered offensive to some.

But the substance of the report was its documentation of the incredible dimensions of pollution in the Fraser. If this documentation was not complete, that could hardly be the fault of the authors of the report. Questionnaires sent to industries along the river were mostly ignored. Vital information was withheld. Investigators were barred from various plants.

The people responsible for the pollution obviously do not want to admit what they're doing.

The silence has rolled in. The Fraser River Report has been filed away in municipal offices and on the shelves of the public relations departments of most of these firms.

The reality of the situation is simply that, as the report clearly shows, the Fraser is a river in its death throes. It is being killed by industry, by cheap treatment methods, by lack of foresight and concern, by governmental ignorance.

The report contains a drawing of a young dinosaur looking up at an adult dinosaur, and the adult dinosaur is saying: "Look, son, we're aware of the problems besetting our society. We're working on them."

It would be easier to revive the Fraser River Report and act on its recommendations now than it will be — how many years from now? — to attempt to revive the Fraser River itself.

Copies of the report may still be obtained from SPECT, 44 West Sixth, Vancouver 10.

COSY CONFRONTATION

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

progress made on refashioning the face of Canada will be thrashed out behind closed doors in cosy little confrontations between Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, the 10 provincial premiers and a bewildered civil servants.

When the conclave is over, Mr. Trudeau will plug into television to announce his version of the events. The 10 provincial premiers will do the same.

Opposition members, embarrassed that politicians from their own parties who happen to be in office in other jurisdictions were involved in Victoria decisions, simply won't know what to do or say. It is true, of course, that the deliberations of federal-provincial conferences are binding on no one; it is nevertheless a fact that what happens in those secret meetings almost always has a bearing on what subsequently happens in the Legislatures throughout Canada. Why then must the public be shut out?

But what is even worse, if it is conceded that the door must be shut on most of us, is that it should also be shut on those leaders of the political parties in opposition. They have not only a right but a desperate need to be well informed.

Yet we see the Acting Prime Minister, Mitchell Sharp, claiming that allowing observers into the closed sessions would offend the provincial authorities. Ontario Premier William Davis grandly invites the opposition leaders along but he too rules that they must not see everything, presumably out of deference to Ottawa.

And so Robert Stanfield and Robert Nixon and David Lewis and Stephen Lewis — and all the others — are allowed to see as much as the rest of us — and never more. It seems a poor way to treat men to whom we have given great responsibility.

Clothes Are for Fun, Games

By SIDNEY CALLAHAN
National Catholic Reporter

I doubt Julius Caesar or Alexander the Great or Robert Bruce suffered from not wearing pants. Nor do I think harem inmates or moslem ladies in purdah and pants prove trousers the mark of independent people.

The first principle in any politics of clothes is to realize that the politics is in the eye of the beholder. Only the culturally conditioned response gives meaning to particular attire and adornment, be it shells, jeans or jewels in nose, navel or ears.

But the next thing to realize is that while the particulars vary, every culture has had some self-adornment signifying something. Even in the animal kingdom friendly monkeys groom one another, and sexual display abounds.

In humans, of course, we find the most complex and elaborate clothing. Man, the overdoer, creates liturgical and ritual dressings as well as dress distinctions for age, role, class and various activities.

Finally, we even have fashion with a capital F, in which all the above play a part. Dressing well takes talent, skill, time and money. Narcissism and sex may have been the original aim, but for most advanced states of chic it's work, work, work.

Both men and women cultivate dress, but the feminists are correct when they deplore the excess feminine energy poured into fashion. With fewer professional outlets and functions, fashion has been one way for women to compete and gain status. Obviously status outranks sex, since hairspray, mascara, make-up, girdles, etc., aren't meant for touching, but for visual impressions.

So what's a feminist to do? Retreat to a puritanism that would put women in the stocks for wearing rouge, ribbons and silks? Should we not only burn bras but shave heads and issue identical unisex uniforms? No, no, Ninotchka; never, Comrade.

On this issue the counter-culture has the best solution. Clothes are for fun and games and personal self-expression. Sexual display is nice, too. But dressing for status, class, color and age is a drag. When dress and fashion are seen as a form of free play, okay, but no more fashion tyranny.

In my politics of clothes, I can admire ascetics living in poverty who give up the pleasures of dress for a higher purpose.

But I'll resist to the last stitch purists who won't let us all, men and women, play dress-up and peek-a-boo.

Are pants really the proper attire for independent people? The feminist who asserts this sees it as a part of her politics of clothes.

Skirts and dresses for her mean "availability and immobility" so new women shouldn't wear them. A like-minded militant once told my daughter to get some pants when she showed the sour lady her new party dress. Then I was berated for buying it. "Did I want to encourage this child's feminine narcissism?"

Did I? Do I? What is the meaning of clothes, especially women's dress? Surely it's more than the pants fetish some feminists have, as they identify with the male aggressor and oppressor.

Pool Within Four Years

DUNCAN — A swim pool in the Cowichan Valley within four years is the goal of Cowichan O.P.R.E.C. Society, members of Duncan and North Cowichan councils were told Thursday.

Op-Rec chairman Pat Moore advised the joint council meeting his committee holds $68,000 in trust and expressed concern about the lack of action following the defeat of a referendum in April last year.

The meeting agreed to instruct the recreation commissions to proceed with formation of a swim pool study committee.

Moore recommended the committee be comprised of three appointed members of the North Cowichan Recreation Commission, three appointed by Duncan Recreation Commission and two appointed by Op-Rec as well as representatives from the public.

PRIZE WINNING jersey cows gather around owners Mr. and Mrs. Erich Roemer of Duncan. The 16-cow herd had the highest breed class average total in Canada for 1970. The total is established after monthly tests by a government inspector for milk weight and butterfat content.

Man Committed for Trial

DUNCAN — A 20-year-old Duncan man was committed for trial in higher court here Thursday on a charge of wounding with intent to cause bodily harm.

A no-publication order was issued by provincial court Judge Eric Winch during the two-day preliminary hearing of Gannang Thom at the request of defence lawyer David Williams.

Thom was charged after an incident May 5 in Henry's Imports at Craig Street, Duncan, where 18-year-old Debbie Painter, also of Duncan, was injured.

No date has been set for the trial.

Duncan Balks On Building Safety H.Q.

DUNCAN — The city of Duncan isn't prepared to invest in a new public safety building, Mayor Jim Quaife told a joint meeting with North Cowichan council on Thursday.

The meeting was discussing the results of a $9,600 joint feasibility study when North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith said he had heard that renovations to the RCMP detachment would cost over $100,000.

He said he would rather invest the money in a new building.

"The city cannot embark on a public safety building at this time," Mayor Quaife said. "Maybe in five years."

Quaife feels the present facilities should be adequate until the regional district is prepared to build on a regional basis.

"Perhaps you are getting a little ahead of the regional district," he noted. "The police told me they can get by with their present facilities for another five or 10 years if necessary."

The two municipalities share the operating costs of the 25-man force in Duncan.

Regional Licensing Urged for Bicycles

DUNCAN — The licensing of bicycles should be done on a regional basis, Duncan and North Cowichan councils decided Thursday.

They were discussing a letter from D. R. McRae, secretary of the Cowichan Regional Safety Council, asking councils to look into the licensing of bikes.

Licensing would be a theft deterrent, and enhance safety because parents would be made aware of their responsibility to ensure their child knows traffic regulations, McRae said.

"There is no way either municipality can do it," North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith said. "It should be done on a regional basis."

"There is definitely some form of registration needed," Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife said. "Bikes are piling up in every police station because there is no form of registration."

Debt Billions To Make Jobs?

By DAN TURNER

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was urged in the Commons Thursday to fight unemployment with heavy deficit financing, but Manpower Minister Otto Lang was not receptive.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) said the government should be willing to run a deficit of up to $1 billion this year and Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) said it should get into serious deficit financing by spending billions on housing in the 1970s.

But the furthest Mr. Lang would go was to say that the government must engage in a responsible policy of deficit financing—which he said it already has undertaken.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson's budget statement is scheduled for Friday, June 18.

His last budget, in December, predicted a $320 million deficit for the 1970-71 fiscal year just completed, and he since has said he believes his fiscal policy has proved to be about right.

SAYS GOVERNMENT FAILS

The House was debating a motion introduced by Louis ComEAU (PC—South Western Nova) saying the government has failed to live up to its duty to create full employment programs.

Under House rules the motion did not come to a vote.

Mr. Hees didn't get any more receptive a response when he pushed for a tougher government threat of wage and price controls.

He said labor and government leaders have told him they abhor the thought of such mandatory controls.

To keep inflation to an acceptable level of 2½ per cent the government should get tough with wage and price guides, he said, making it clear they would be turned into mandatory control if they were not followed.

DOUBTS BACKING

Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South), parliamentary secretary to Mr. Benson, said there was a massive national consensus when such controls were in force during the Second World War, which he said he doubts exists now in Canada.

If there had been, voluntary guides laid down by the prices and incomes commission would have been more successful.

Most people would not want to return to a controlled Canada, he said.

He criticized the opposition for "preaching exaggerated views of the state of the Canadian economy" which made people think exaggerated remedies are desirable and even essential.

Datsun 1200: A little beauty goes a long way.

Depending on how you drive, Datsun 1200 goes about twice as far on a gallon of gas as a standard domestic car. Impressive.

But there's a good deal more to an economy car than great gas mileage.

What's important is how the car behaves while it's covering all that ground.

Datsun 1200 goes from zero to sixty in 15.1 seconds.

Its turning circle is less than 27 feet.

It's loaded with a list of extras that don't cost extra.

And it comes in a choice of Sedan or Fastback models.

(The Fastback costs a little more, but then, it looks a little sharper.)

Datsun 1200. It's pretty, it's powerful, it's fun... and it's economical.

SPECTATOR-TYPE YACHT RACE SLATED ... OFF DALLAS ROAD SUNDAY

Mini-Swiftsure Is for Landlubbers

By PAT DUFOUR

A miniature replay of Swiftsure will be sailed off the Victoria coast Sunday with a "front seat view", all the way for watchers on Dallas Road.

Expected to join boats from local waters in the "centennial" yacht race, sponsored by the Greater Victoria Centennial 71 Committee, are boats from Bellingham, Maple Bay and the mainland.

General chairman Jim McVie says the course — which will range anywhere from 14 to 19 miles — will be laid out so that those on shore will be able to watch every leg. He's looking for an entry of 100 boats.

"We want this one to be a spectator-type thing."

Yachtsmen don't have to be a member of an organized club to take part, but their boats must meet department of transport safety requirements.

Registrations — there's no entrance fee — will be taken at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club tonight from 8 to 10 p.m. and again Saturday from noon to 5 p.m.

There will be five divisions — with trophies for each division winner. Getting their start gun at 10 a.m. will be IOR yachts, followed at five-minute intervals by PHRF boats rated below 3.0, PHRF boats rated 3.0 and above, Thunderbirds and Cal 20s.

Members of the Victoria Cruising Club also have a big weekend ahead. They'll stop off Saturday at Beacom marine park, then head for Scott's Lair at Port Browning after supper. Sunday, it will be best bib and tucker routine as the club holds its annual sailpast, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The Victoria Canoe Club are also planning a fun weekend. Fifteen canoes are expected to gather at Port Renfrew under the leadership of Gerry Irvine.

This is to be a family outing with exploration of Gordon River, San Juan River, the West Coast trail and the botanical gardens.

Steve Merriman's Vandal was over-all winner Tuesday when Turkey Head Sailing Association boats raced the last of their five-race summer series of light winds of between five to seven knots.

All 23 boats finished. Stan Cosburn's Wild Thing placed second. Dick James' Lalanga and Frank Rhodes' Rampage, tied for third spot. After them were George Johnstone's Tarquin II, Cecil Miles' Ixia, Ron Saunders' Irrawaddy, Gerry Howell-Jones' Heliwr, Ron Wickstrom's Tsimshian and Ron Watson's Delphis.

Tuesday's win clinched the summer series' trophy for Vandal.

Two races were sailed by dinghy sailors of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, on Wednesday.

Jeannie Whitby won both Fireball races, being trailed in the first one by Bill Whitby and Dennis Carlow, and in the second beating out Vince Martorino and Leo Panatello.

Mike Weir also had a double win in 420 competition. Pat Davidson and Mel Stefens placed second and third in the first race, reversing their positions in the second sailout.

Police Chiefs Want Return Of Hanging for Murderers

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Western Canada's police chiefs called Thursday for a return to hanging for all murderers.

Delegates to the 16th annual conference of the Western Canada Chiefs of Police Association passed a formal resolution favoring capital punishment for all cases of premeditated murder.

A five-year trial period under which only the killers of policemen or prison guards are liable to capital punishment expires at the end of 1972.

Chief M. B. MacBrayne of West Vancouver said "what we want to get over is the fact that it has always been and always will be our chief aim to protect the public."

Chief MacBrayne, who chaired the conference, said delegates did not have any statistics in front of them on which to base their resolution but stated there has been an increase in the number of premeditated murders since capital punishment was curtailed.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson of British Columbia, Thursday, told delegates he is addressing the conference impressed with police efforts toward better training and improved community relationships.

He urged restraint in the face of mounting social unrest and dissension but said too many people look to the police as the sole answer in dealing with disturbances.

HANDLED WELL

He added that it is of great credit that "we have contained those disturbances better than many cities on the North American continent."

Inspector Bob Heywood, officer in charge of the RCMP North Vancouver detachment, suggested modern police methods can bring about loss of contact with the public.

He said his detachment is currently undertaking a program with the local school board to explain police work to students.

Police Chief S. W. Drader of Medicine Hat spoke of difficulties encountered by police in regard to the warning they must give suspects concerning court evidence.

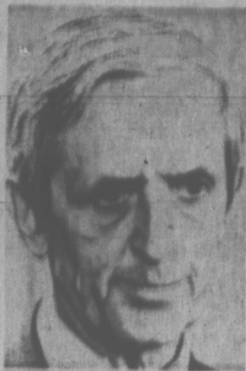

Drader maintained that police should be able to give evidence to the effect that a suspect would not say anything if the person remained silent when questioned.

He said seasoned criminals take advantage of the situation by not saying anything if questioned in the knowledge that this cannot be read into court.

"Some people say it is only our job to arrest a person and take him to court. I object to that because, as a citizen and as a human being, it doesn't end there. It matters very much what happens."

Chief Art Cookson of Regina said he fears the situation will get worse before it improves.

Delegates also favored compulsory bicycle registration to combat increasing bicycle theft.

Capital Needed

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene apologized in advance here for giving a speech he had not seen until a short while earlier.

But, he told a petroleum association meeting, he would stick to the text.

"We have a new policy in Ottawa. All speeches must be delivered to the prime minister for clearance in case there is any anti-Russian or anti-American content."

"But I can say one thing — anybody who thinks we do not need more foreign capital than we have had in the past doesn't understand the Canadian economy."

Formerly, Canada accepted United States capital on the basis "all we want is your money and we don't care how you develop our resources."

"Now we are saying we care."

The government is awaiting the results of studies before imposing strict rules on the acceptance of foreign capital, he told the petroleum society of the Canadian institute of mining and metallurgy.

"In a short time we'll start making decisions."

"We have good cards to play and we have to be good traders on our energy resources."

Juniors To Perform

Beginning at noon Saturday, the Colwood Trailriders will hold a Junior Fun Day at the Metchosin Road club grounds.

The judge will be Richard Nichols of Duncan and there will be three performance classes — reining horse, riding horse and obstacle course.

The remainder of the program will include such events as: two-legged race (two horses and riders), can-can race (polo), bareback wrestling, ring spearing, crepe paper race, team barrels (two riders and horses), flag race, recelle race, team stake race (two riders and horses), ribbon race and non-riders obstacle race.

Y's New Guinea Project Under Way

The YMCA's and YWCA's project to assist in training the indigenous people of New Guinea and Papua, situated north of Australia, is moving ahead, Harold Jenner, general secretary of the YMCA of Australia, said Thursday.

The 1871 Victoria Miles for Millions has pledged 2 per cent of its net total income to the World Y Development project mainly supported by YMCAs and YM-YWCAs of British Columbia.

Bruce McKean, organizer of the Miles for Millions, is also leaving in two weeks for New Guinea where he will teach for two years under the Canadian University Service Overseas program.

He will teach in a secondary school at Mount Hagen, situated in the highland district of New Guinea.

Jenner was in Victoria Thursday to provide up-to-date information on the B.C. Y project.

He said a building had been acquired at Mount Hagen and a staff is being trained to take over social and community work in the district.

"It is an indigenous staff trained in Australia," he said. "The basic project is to assist the people to adjust themselves as they move from a simple to a complex society."

The majority of people living in the highland district of New Guinea-Papua only came into contact with the white culture in the mid-thirties, he pointed out.

Sir Arthur Nicholson, president of the YMCA National Council of Australia, was also scheduled to visit Victoria at the same time as Jenner, but cancelled his visit due to illness.

He is expected to come to Victoria later this month.

B.C. Tel Puts Case Monday For 15 Per Cent Rate Boost

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Telephone Co., with some of the highest rates in Canada, goes before the Canadian transport commission next week in a bid for higher rates.

The company has asked for approval for the raises by Aug. 1 and the commission ordered a public examination of the proposals to begin here Monday.

In what would be the first general increase of telephone rates since 1959, B.C. Tel seeks an average increase of 15 per cent on monthly exchange service. It blames high interest rates on money borrowed for expansion projects to meet customer demand, and increased costs of labor, supplies and equipment required to build, operate and maintain the phone system.

In addition, B.C. Tel says it will need $680 million during the five years through 1975 to build new telephone facilities if it is to meet requirements.

The proposed rate increases are opposed by the provincial government, the B.C. Federation of Labor, the cities of Vancouver and Victoria and the B.C. section of the Canadian Bar Association.

REFER TO PROFITS

They cite B.C. Tel's existing high rates and say much of the company's profit goes to its parent corporation, General Telephone and Electronics of New York, without showing in B.C. Tel books.

The monthly exchange charge for an individual residence telephone in Toronto or Montreal is $6.00. In Vancouver it's $6.25 and would rise to $7.20 under the proposed new schedule. For a two-party line, the eastern rate is $4.65. Vancouver's is $4.90, with $5.65 sought. Vancouver subscribers can call fewer than 600,000 numbers toll free; in Toronto and Montreal, Bell Canada subscribers have access to 1.4 million numbers without a long distance charge.

Critics say B.C. Tel does not call tenders for telephones and other equipment but buys almost all of it from either Automatic Electric (Canada) Ltd. or Lenkurt Electric Ltd., both wholly-owned subsidiaries of General Telephone.

B.C. Tel says its policy of buying from Lenkurt and Automatic Electric leads to a better deal because of equipment compatibility, lower inventories, bulk ordering and other factors. On the question of monthly charges, the president of B.C. Tel, J. E. Richardson, says: "It is no secret, nor has it ever been a secret, that telephone rates in British Columbia are higher than in many other cities in Canada."

"During the transport commission hearings, sworn evidence will be produced as to the higher costs of providing service in British Columbia, wage levels in this province as compared with the rest of Canada, the province's terrain and population distribution, the integrated corporate operations, and much more."

The CTC hearing is expected to last at least two weeks.

his style:

In the days when sail was king, B.C.'s weekend mariners knew a thing or two about the water. And the beer. Sure, there have been some changes — but the yachtsmen of yesteryear would still say "Aye" to Old Style. It's still their style. Slow brewed and naturally aged to wet a man-sized whistle. That's why it's British Columbia's favorite beer. Down the hatch, me hearties!

10 DRUMMERS UNDER ARREST

LONDON (AP) — Ten of the Queen's ceremonial drummers have been put under open arrest for being late on parade.

The men belong to the Brigade of Guards drum corps who are to take part in the trooping the color ceremony to mark the Queen's birthday June 12.

An officer said the men had complained about overwork. They showed up 10 minutes late for parade Wednesday.

Open arrest means the men must report regularly to the guardroom until their case is settled.

SKAGIT VALLEY?

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Witnesses testifying before the International Joint Commission disagreed sharply Thursday on what effects raising Ross Dam would have on the Canadian ecology.

Arthur Lang, spokesman for Seattle City Light, said the utility's plan to raise the dam 122.5 feet actually would improve the recreational value of the Skagit Valley, which extends into British Columbia. But a spokesman for the North Cascade Conservation Council said just the opposite would be true.

City Light has asked permission to raise the dam to 1,725 feet, a move that would produce additional power equal to 20 per cent of Seattle's annual power requirement but flood sections of Skagit Valley in B.C.

Christian Herter Jr., special assistant secretary of state for environmental affairs and head of the U.S. delegation, said the IJC is limited in scope to determining what effect the higher dam would have on the Canadian environment.

The hearings moved to Vancouver for additional hearings today and Saturday.

New Patrick in NHL As Lester Joins Kings

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Lester Patrick, 31, whose father and grandfather have made notable contributions to hockey, was named business manager Thursday of Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League.

Patrick, who attended the University of Colorado and Hartford University is the son of Lynn Patrick, St. Louis Blues vice-president and general manager, and the grandson of the late Lester Patrick, long-time coach and general manager of New York Rangers.

BILL WALKER

Mary Coutts was saying that if things were a "bit different" in Brazil, it was no more than she or other Canadians had expected, even if they did finish ninth in the world basketball championships.

Mary was a member of Canada's national women's team which recently competed in the title event. And she feels that if the over-all efforts of the club were acceptable, then the results were commendable. Besides, perhaps now Canada has a better understanding of what it must do to grab a medal at the Pan-American Games in Colombia later this summer.

"BIG" is the way Mary, a Victoria schoolteacher, described the Russian team, which won it all. At six feet even, Mary was the tallest member of the Canadian team and she had "to look up" to all but three members of the Russian club.

Their centre was seven feet, one inch, and two of the other girls were six feet, eight inches, she revealed. Mary, whose chore it was to attempt to check the giant Russian centre, said laughingly:

"All I could do was jump up and down in front of her and wave my arms."

It was just as tough on offence, Mary recalled. "Every time I went to move, the mountain moved with me. Her arms stretched from here to here."

The Cuban team had a little dandy, too, she recalled. This girl of five feet, four inches could virtually "dunk" the ball, Mary said. "Believe it, it was almost unbelievable. She could jump that high."

As for the general competition, Mary said Canada was behind in one fundamental, the passing phase of the game. "The Russians and the other European teams used many more passes than we did," she said. "They would pass 10 or 15 times, and very quickly, before taking a shot. We might have four or five."

Mary felt this failing within the Canadian club was a matter that must be rectified before the Pan-Am Games next month. "Our shooting was average," she added.

Gauging Canada's chances for the Pan-Am event on what she saw in Brazil, it is Mary's thought that if Canada can get by one of the big three — the U.S., Cuba or Brazil — then there is an excellent chance at a bronze medal. "We have to beat one of those clubs," she said.

In the world tourney, Canada lost to Cuba, by nine points, the U.S. by 20, and Australia by 10, besides being bombed 94-44 by the Russians.

Australia was the upset. "We should have beaten them," Mary said. "Against the U.S. we had an early lead, but they hit a slumper-cent average on their field-goal attempts, and we couldn't match them."

Winning games were against Argentina, twice; Madagascar, and Ecuador, the latter in double overtime.

"The refereeing was good, but different," Mary said. "There was complete impartiality, but most officials had different interpretations of the rules."

For instance, "One referee called double dribble every time a player switched hands — but he did it against everyone." Mainly the advantage was given to the offence, she explained, and a lot of charging by Canadian standards was ignored.

As to benefits for the future, "we learned a lot," said Mary, and "generally everybody played about the same length of time in each game. This was so we would be better prepared for the Pan-Am."

If the food was "different," it was nevertheless wholesome, with plenty of meat, and especially fresh fruit. "You should have seen those papayas," she enthused, "and the grapefruit!"

Oh, sure the girls had their share of fun—"Everyone tried to be so nice to us," Mary said, "the country clubs were fabulous, and the tournament facilities excellent. We played at Sao Paulo, Araraquara and Rio, and all the stadiums were great. There were crowds up to 20,000 at some games, and noise!... especially when the Brazilians played."

If the post-game cold showers didn't roll down too well, they didn't bother Mary's personal performance that much. She was reasonably pleased, and averaged 15 points a game, "which was my jersey number," she explained.

She also enjoyed the country, liked the people, and was deeply impressed with the Mormon Temple where she attended church services. "It was beautiful," she said.

"I made a lot of friends, and now have several pen pals," Mary added.

According to reports, even the reporters got gathered in by Mary's congeniality, and now have a better understanding of Canada because of her.

"Yes, I won an award," Mary grinned.

The press-radio people named me "Miss Simpatico" of the championships."

Which is as it should be.

In English, "Miss Simpatico" means "nice."

Mabee Supplies Own Plate Power

Bob Mabee kept his pitching slate clean Thursday night by batting in two runs as Farmer Construction downed Greaves Movers 4-1 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Royal Athletic Park.

Mabee's four-hitter produced his second win without a defeat this season.

Farmer's notched the two winning runs in the fourth inning as John McKeachie, who reached base on a fielder's choice, and Brian McKenzie, who received a base on balls, pulled off a double steal and scored on Mabee's two-out single.

Vicettes to Play Trio With Blues

Victoria Vicettes are heading for a busy weekend, with three Inter-City Senior Women's Softball League games scheduled at Central Park against Vancouver Blues.

At 6:30 Saturday, the clubs will play a game postponed from earlier in the season, and they'll be back Sunday for a pair of league contests, at 2:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Three Americans Gain British Amateur Semis

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (CP)—Three Americans and an Englishman reached the semi-finals of the British amateur golf championship today.

Tom Kite of the United States defeated Ireland's 20-year-old Roddy Carr 5 and 3.

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP)—An all-American final was assured today when United States Walker Cup players Jim Simons and Steve Melnyk won their semi-final matches in the British amateur golf championship.

Jim Simons of the U.S. defeated Hugh Stuart of Scotland 2 and 1 in the other upper bracket quarter-final and plays Kite this afternoon in an 18-hole semi-final.

MELNYK WINS. In the lower bracket, Steve Melnyk of the U.S. eliminated Ed Updegraff, 49-year-old American doctor, 4 and 3. Earlier Updegraff, who is pushing 50 years of age, had scored a upset 4-and-3 win over Irish star Joe Carr, a two-time winner and father of Roddy.

Melnik will meet Peter Moody of England, who defeated Hugh Campbell of Scotland, this morning.

Mike Bonallack of England, who has won the title the last three years in the five times he has won the tournament, was eliminated Thursday when he was upset 4 and 3 in Thursday's morning round by Mike Schwitz of South Africa.

Schwitz bowed out in the afternoon, losing 4 and 2 to Stuart.

Two Dan Greens Pace Boxla Wins

Five goals by Dan Green set the pace as Saanich E. J. Hunter tripped Esquimalt Teamsters 13-4 Thursday night in a South Vancouver Island Intermediate Lacrosse League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

In another game at Pearkes Arena, Victoria McDonalds Bred trounced Saanich O.K. Tire, 17-3. Another Dan Green led this assault with five goals and five assists.

before the Canadiens' season opener in Philadelphia against the Flyers.

On that occasion the Vancouver-born Ferguson changed his mind. He was back in the lineup Nov. 17 and remained with the club until his recent Stanley Cup victory against Chicago Black Hawks.

Ferguson told a news conference that his voluntary retirement papers were already signed and in the mail to Sam Pollock.

However, the Montreal gen-

'Bellies Hike Boxla Margin

NEW WESTMINSTER — New Westminster Salmonbellies gained a little breathing space atop the Western Lacrosse Association with a 7-4 victory Thursday over cellar-dwelling Vancouver Burrards.

Victoria Shamrocks, who visit Coquitlam Adanacs on Saturday, are now four points behind Salmonbellies in the runner-up slot.

Paul Parnell and Al Lewthwaite each scored twice for New Westminster in the game before 2,220 fans, largest crowd of the WLA season in the "Royal City."

Next game: Saturday — VICTORIA at Coquitlam.

Miller Forgets Slump With Seven-Under 65

ATLANTA (AP) — A two-month slump almost convinced young Californian John Miller to bypass the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

"I've been scoring so badly lately I just wanted to go home," he said. "The only reason I came here is because I like this course."

The 24-year-old blond enhanced his liking of the "hilly, 6,883-yard Atlanta Country Club course Thursday when he fired a sizzling seven-under-par 32-33

—65 with a round that included an eagle and seven birdies.

It gave him a two-shot lead over a quartet deadlocked at 67: Jack Nicklaus, Orville Moody, Ray Floyd and Dave Eichelberger.

Ken Fulton of Montreal led the Canadian entries with a 70. Seven were deadlocked at 68: Lee Trevino, Bob Lunn, Gardner Dickinson, Jim Colbert, Jim Dent, Rod Curl and Bob Barber.

their intention to quit for good.

A player who signs his voluntarily retirement papers cannot return to the NHL for one year without the express consent of all 14 clubs.

Asked why he returned after his withdrawal from the game last autumn, Ferguson said it was mainly because he did not relish the idea of going out a loser. The Canadiens missed the playoffs after a disappointing 1969-70 season.

Records Blasted As Central Wins

Oak Bay Second On Team List At School Meet

Central captured its second straight title and the record books received a hefty shakeup in finals of the Greater Victoria junior high school track and field meet Thursday at Centennial Stadium.

After winning its first championship since 1956 last year, Central finished with a 16-point margin (238-222) over runner-up Oak Bay in what proved to be a close four-school battle until the final stage of the meet.

Lansdowne was third with 192 points followed by Colquitz at 187.

Central held a 146-132 advantage over Oak Bay in the boys' section and Colquitz topped the girls' events by a 128-96 margin over Lansdowne.

FEW MARKS SURVIVE

When the day was over only five track and eight field events remained unmatched or bettered in the 40 holdover events.

Distaff athletes snapped nine records in the final day of competition while the boys set eight new standards and tied three. Seven other records fell in qualifying trials Tuesday and Wednesday.

Cheryl Blevins of Colquitz broke two sprint marks out of the five records that fell in the junior girls' division Thursday.

TWO SPRINT WINS

Miss Blevins, whose 1970 100-metre midget mark of 12.4 seconds survived the assault, brought the junior record down to 12.6 and the 200-metre record, for the second time in the meet, to 25.7.

Debbie Fong brought Colquitz another new standard with a 17.4" long jump.

Bay Cox and Cathy Sapford of Central earned two other records in the division. Miss Cox covered the 400-metres in 56.3 and Miss Sapford ran 800-metres in 2:13.3.

David Cox of Central recorded two new marks out of the four broken in the midget boys' section. He won the 800-metres in 2:15.4 and the 1,500 metres in 4:32.6.

RELAY TRIUMPH

The other marks were a 49.0 relay effort by High Rock and a 37.8" triple jump by Kevin Scott of Central.

Mark Warren of Arbutus equalled the high jump standard of 5'2" and, along with runner-up Dave Dalziel of St. Michael's, tied the 200-metres mark of 25.6.

Junior boys' records were set by Jim Walker of Colquitz (100-metres in 11.8), Garth Hallan of Reynolds (200-metres in 23.7), Grant Boland of Oak Bay (tie with Hallan and 400-metres in 1:16.5) and Barry Scroggs of Reynolds (1,500-metres in 4:16.5).

CINDY DRUCE WINS

Central's sprint relay team equalled the mark of 46.5.

Cindy Druce of Cedar Hill (200-metres in 26.4), Debbie Gerrath of Colquitz (82'4" discus toss) and Jan Crook of Colquitz (38' shot put toss) established new junior girls' standards.

Other double winners were Victor Pipkin of Central (midget boys' discus and javelin), Brent Taylor of Oak Bay (junior boys' long and triple jumps) and Earl Marson of Lansdowne (junior boys' high jump and shot put).

Grey Cup Finalists Get Hike in Pay

STEWART LANG Reports on The Outdoors

Salmon fishermen planning to hitch up their boats by dawn's early light and head out for the weekend face a pleasant puzzle in selecting a destination on Vancouver Island—either the west coast for springs or the east coast for bluebacks.

Springs are beginning to show up in waters at the mouth of the Alberni Canal and reports of good commercial catches off the island's west coast might indicate a bright summer ahead for anglers.

The stretch of water between Sooke and Pedder Bay has been described as "hotter than a firecracker" for springs. About four out of every seven boats are getting fish deep off Secretary Island and Robert Collins topped all catches in the past week with a 41-pounder on Sunday.

Funny thing was he might have had a bigger one that "got away" the day before.

While Collins was trolling in the same area, something grabbed his lure and snapped his rod off near the handle where it was attached to the boat.

Beechey Head is also producing a few lunkers of this type and fishermen working out of Pedder Bay have been coming back with springs up to 30 pounds from Whirl Bay and Bentinck Island.

Wally Yager limited out in this latter area on Tuesday using 90 feet of line, a large dodger, one pound of weight and anchovies for bait. His catches weighed in at nine, 10, 11 and 30 pounds—after only two hours fishing.

Around Oak Bay springs weigh from six to 22 pounds and have come in from the Gap, Discovery Island and Trial Island. Successful fishermen have been using 80 to 125 feet of line and "one to two" pounds of weight or a planer with a dodger.

Halibut flats have been yielding up halibut (what else) up to 80 pounds.

Spring reports from Sidney and Deep Cove are skimpy, probably because of a lack of fishing pressure.

Down in Saanich Inlet, blues and springs form a mixed bag for a number of fishermen.

Blues may be found well offshore between Semanus Island and Willis Point while springs constitute the main return in Tod Inlet, between Willis Point and the Boulder and along the Bamberton shore to McCurdy Point.

Mill Bay is giving up both springs and blues.

And up to 95 per cent of goats out are coming back with either springs or blues from Goldstream Island to the Narrows in the Finlayson Arm end of Saanich Inlet.

Blues and a few small springs have been caught near P-34 bluff in Sansum Narrows and on up through to Tent Island.

Multitudes of bluebacks are moving around in Nanaimo Harbour and a quick tour is often needed to locate them. The area near Grey Rocks has also been giving up the odd spring.

Off Campbell River, springs have been landed near O'Connell's Cove and southern tip of Quadra Island while blues have ended up in fishboxes near Salmon Point, Shelter Point, Butler's and April Point.

For the trout anglers, melting snow is still keeping the level of many lakes high and the water cool. This has helped to produce good returns from Council, Sproat, Ninnim, Lower Campbell and Amor Lakes.

And anglers using a white fly at night on the Cowichan River above Skutz Falls have come home with numerous brown trout.

NIBBLES: All women are reminded of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association "Sweetheart Derby" on Sunday... hours are from dawn until 12 noon with prize presentations around 1 p.m. at Angler's Anchorage... tickets for this open derby are available from any Saanich Inlet houseboat... derby chairman Will Wilson and committee members Marie Sidaway, Elva Radke and Pat Turnbull have lined up many prizes to suite anglers of the fairer sex.

Roy Smith landed a 20.03 pound spring to capture the trophy during the third week of the VSIAA Qualifying Derby... hidden weight winners were Sid Sidaway, Roy Rendle, Ron Service, Win Rusk and C. C. Brown.

Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association held its annual spring-coho derby last Sunday... Chinook trophy was captured by George Lohr, who landed a 21.08-pounder in the Narrows... Elwood Smith won the Coho trophy with a 3.12 pound catch... junior trophy went to Doug Massa for his 4.04 catch and Florence Pond captured distaff laurels with a 3.10-pounder.

MONTREAL (CP) —

This year's Grey Cup winners will get $2,000 a man for action in the Canadian Football League's championship game—$500 more than Montreal Alouettes' players received for the 1970 win, the CFL ruled at its semi-annual meeting Thursday.

The meeting continued today. CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur said the league has raised total Grey Cup awards to $112,000 from $80,000, thus giving each player on the winning team $2,000 and each member on the losing squad $1,500. The previous rates were $1,500 and $1,000 respectively.

The raise fell short of a request by the CFL Player's Association which asked for $3,000 and $2,000.

The league also adopted a universal draft for Canadian football players attending universities in the U.S. and Canada.

Gaudaur said the new college draft will become effective after the 1972 season but no player in either country will be eligible until his class graduates.

Under the current setup each of the nine CFL clubs holds territorial rights and players invited to attend school in the U.S. have their playing rights automatically returned to the club controlling their territory when they finish school.

Under the new plan, each club could protect only two players from its area returning from the U.S. The remainder would revert into a common pool for draft purposes.

The commissioner said the plan would be put into effect to overcome "an economic disparity" felt by several league members who do not have large population centres within their territorial limits and therefore fewer young football players than other teams.

More high school graduates leave for U.S. college training from larger centres like Montreal and Toronto, thus benefiting these clubs more than clubs like Saskatchewan and Edmonton.

LOOKS FOR HOST

Gaudaur also announced during the course of the first day of meetings that the league is interested in receiving applications from cities wishing to play host to the 1972 Grey Cup spectacle.

He said he had already received a bid from Ottawa but any other interested cities would have until this year's Grey Cup game to forward applications.

The meeting also ratified the 1972 schedule but a proposal suggesting that full East-West interlocking schedule played in 1973 was referred for further study.

While Gaudaur said the 1972 schedule may be subject to minor changes, he promised that television viewers will have a Saturday or Sunday game from Labor Day until the end of the season.

The schedule eliminates mid-week games in the Western Conference after Thanksgiving Day, the commissioner said.

tells no-hit story

Holtzman Spins No-Hitter; Astroturf Spins Ball Foul

By The Associated Press

Ken Holtzman's strong left arm and some co-operative Cincinnati Astroturf have combined to produce the 1971 baseball season's first no-hitter.

Holtzman, the lanky Chicago Cub left-hander, spun a 1-0 classic at the Reds to highlight the abbreviated Thursday night baseball action.

In the only other games played, St. Louis Cardinals trimmed Pittsburgh Pirates 7-1 and Atlanta Braves downed Houston Astros 5-2 in the other National League action and Boston Red Sox edged New York Yankees 3-2 in the only American League encounter.

But the night belonged to Holtzman, who pitched the second no-hitter of his career, overcoming some early wildness and retiring the last 11 Reds in order. He struck out six, including Tommy Helms and Lee May for the final two outs in the ninth inning. The only Cincinnati runners came on four walks.

REDS TRY EVERYTHING
The Reds tried everything to get a hit off Holtzman and even went to the extreme of having slugger Johnny Bench lay down a leadoff bunt in the seventh inning. It was, according to Holtzman, his closest call.

"At first, I thought Bench had a hit," the 25-year-old pitcher said. "There was no way I could have thrown Bench out if the ball remained fair."

Holtzman rushed off the mound, across the Astroturf-covered infield and towards the ball.

"When I got over there, I saw the ball was spinning and I knew it would roll foul," the pitcher said. The ball spun off the artificial turf into foul territory and then Bench fled out.

That was the Reds' best chance for a hit.

In the top of the third, Holtzman scored the game's only run. He reached first on Tony Perez' throwing error, moved up on an infield out and scored on Glenn Beckert's single.

Holtzman also pitched a no-hitter on Aug. 19, 1969, against Atlanta and said after Thursday's classic he felt much the same way he had after his first one. "A little in shock and awfully tired. I let it all out in the last inning."

Holtzman threw a total of 108 pitches and became the first Cub pitcher in history to hurl more than one no-hitter.

Student Workshop

COMEDY: ADMISSION FREE

Senior students of Bastion theatre will present a workshop production, today and Saturday at Newcombe Auditorium.

For the end-of-term project, director Stuart Baker has selected the comedy, An Italian Straw Hat, by Eugene Labiche and Marc Michel.

In the original it is a five-act play but it will be presented by Bastion in a shortened and adapted four-act version.

The large cast affords all students an opportunity to participate. The production is a 100 per cent student affair with all backstage work also being handled by the young people.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. and there is no admission charge. With termination of fall and winter classes, Bastion is planning another summer school of theatre to run from July 26 to Aug. 14, with each age group taking three classes per week. Registrations are now being accepted at 30 Bastion Square.

Other summer plans include the popular children's outdoor theatre in the city squares and shopping centres, starting in mid-July.

Two plays by Canadian playwrights will be performed. They are an original adaptation of Treasure Island by Ernie Schwartz, and a musical, The Popcorn Man, by Pat Patterson and Dodi Robb.

It cost them $3,700 to win a $1,600 bet but two hardy cyclists are elated over beating the P and O liner Arcadia from San Francisco to Ketchikan, Alaska.

Professional adventurer Kenneth Crutchlow of London, England, and San Francisco businessman Paxton Beale told their story Thursday when the 30,000-ton liner docked at Ogden Point.

The return trip aboard the Arcadia was part of the bet they won from the P and O line. The rest was $1,500 for winning and a side bet of $100 that the two cyclists would never make it.

Crutchlow, who has walked across Death Valley, ridden a camel across the Sahara and hitch-hiked around the world in 96 days with only $24 in his pocket, said his latest feat was the most dangerous of them all.

Cycling in relays, they rode behind a specially-equipped van that carried three helpers, spare bicycle equipment, safety gear and other supplies.

Using the van as a wind-break, they kept 18 inches from it, receiving steering directions from a member of the team inside the van.

Crutchlow said if the van had braked suddenly or taken an unscheduled sharp turn it would have been certain injury — if not death — for the cyclist.

TOUGHEST PART

Cycling 24 hours a day in relays, he and Beale made the trip in five days, five hours and 27 minutes. This was 12 hours ahead of the ship.

Crutchlow, explaining the trip had been planned scientifically, said they ate almost constantly and consumed vast quantities of high-calorie drinks.

Both ship and cyclists left San Francisco's Pier 35 at the same time May 22 heading for Ketchikan, 2,000 miles away.

Crutchlow said the toughest part of the trip was the stretch between Prince George and Prince Rupert.

"Aside from it being cold, there were potholes in the road that you could have buried a bike in."

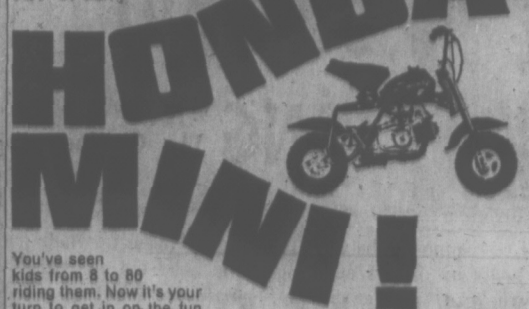

Because the road ends at Prince Rupert, the two cyclists were allowed to take any transportation of their choice from there to Ketchikan.

They opted for a seaplane.

The team will have to fly from here to San Francisco because the United States' Jones Act prohibits American ships from carrying foreign cargo.

The Arcadia is British.

OTTAWA — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette predicts that the forthcoming constitutional conference in Victoria will be a fiasco.

Interviewed Thursday night on the CBC-TV program 'Encounter', Caouette said that while Canada's heads of government are fighting for a new constitution "they don't even know what they want."

"Ask any premier what changes they want and they don't know — Prime Minister Trudeau doesn't know either."

In reply to questions, he said he would support changes giving more powers to Quebec "but I wouldn't go along with any constitution which didn't give the same rights to all provinces."

NEW YORK — More U.S. males were sterilized last year than in any previous year, according to a private survey. Lea Inc. of Ambler, Pa., in a survey for the Association for Voluntary Sterilization, said 750,000 males were sterilized in 1970 and about 90 per cent of the operations were conducted by private doctors in their offices.

TORONTO — Advertising has the same literary licence as poetry, says Montreal advertising executive Gerald St. Denis. "If sex must be perfumed, powdered and shaped to command attention, it is ridiculous to condemn the more modest embellishment of the world of commerce," said St. Denis, president of Publisque, a subsidiary of McCormick Advertising Ltd. of Toronto.

ST. LOUIS — The high chief of Scotland's Macdonald clan is in St. Louis to raise money to help save the ancestral Macdonald lands from the tax collector's auction block. Rt. Hon. Godfrey James Macdonald of Macdonald, 23, said high death taxes are at the root of the problem. Lord Macdonald said the duties amount to $500,000 and at least 20 per cent of that amount is needed by the end of July to prevent the government from auctioning the 40,000-acre Sleat Peninsula on the Isle of Skye. The lands include Castle Camus, built in the days of the Norsemen, that Lord Macdonald said is "definitely haunted by a mysterious green lady."

TORONTO — Tom Wells, Ontario minister of social and family services, Thursday night praised the B.C. government for its "courage" in banning liquor and cigarette advertising in the province. It had acted on an issue that other governments — including his own — had not moved on, he told members of the Canadian Advertising and Sales Association at a dinner.

CHICAGO — Dr. Werner von Braun, deputy associate administrator of the United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Thursday that non-astronaut passengers would be travelling in orbit on a space shuttle system by the end of the decade. Von Braun told a news conference the space shuttle system would provide one answer to the high cost of space travel. "Using up a rocket every time we make a flight is like tossing an airplane away after one flight," he said.

Patrols Planned
Following Fire

NANAIMO (CP) — RCMP have agreed to make regular patrols of nearby Protection and Newcastle Islands, following a weekend fire blamed on vandals, Mayor Frank Ney said.

He said a summer home was destroyed in the fire and Protection Island ratepayers asked for more policing.

Warrants Issued

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Warrants were issued Thursday for Phillip Soper, 21, of the United States and Carol Boyle, 22, of Burnaby when they failed to appear in district court on charges of cultivating marijuana. Cash bail of $200 was seized. They were arrested the night of May 13 when the RCMP seized between $3,000 and $5,000 worth of plants beside two cabins near here.

Damages Awarded

VAN COUVER (CP) — Damages of $70,382 were awarded Thursday in British Columbia Supreme Court to Patricia Vallery, 26, for injuries suffered as a pedestrian when she was struck by a police car after it was involved in a collision with another car here.

Takeover Charged

SWIFT CURRENT, Sask. (CP) — The New Democratic Party has sold out to labor bosses and extremists at the expense of Saskatchewan farmers, Premier Ross Thatcher told about 500 persons at an election rally Thursday.

Thatcher said the NDP national leadership convention earlier this spring "was taken over lock, stock and barrel by the big eastern and United States unions."

"Many of us were appalled by the number of extremists at the convention and at the influence of Wafflers, Maoists and many others. Saskatchewan socialists must realize there is a very small role left for moderates and no role at all for farmers."

Study Postponed

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta treasury department has postponed a study of increases in bank service charges, Provincial Treasurer A. O. Aalborg said Thursday.

The study was announced March 31 in the legislature, the same day the increased charges became effective. The study was to have determined whether the increases were justified.

Aalborg said in an interview Thursday the province had postponed its study because the increased charges had been discussed by the federal department of corporate and consumer affairs.

Women Defrauded

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 32-year-old Winnipeg man who defrauded five women of more than $10,000 in the past year through promises of marriage was sentenced Thursday in Winnipeg Magistrate's Court to three years in penitentiary.

Robert Wayne Heard pleaded guilty to four charges of defrauding women of money before Magistrate Anthony J. Filutik — the same magistrate who sentenced him to three years on a similar charge a month ago. He is to serve a total six years.

"I wonder if there are any more women who have been bilked by you but are too embarrassed to come forward," the magistrate told Heard.

Split on Abortion

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — The Manitoba Registered Nurses' Association has asked its members to submit to the federal government their personal views on whether abortion should be removed from the Criminal Code. Delegates to the association's annual meeting could not reach a unified position on the issue after being asked by the Canadian Nurses' Association to support their premise that abortion should not be punishable by law.

Rockets Explode

EDMONTON (CP) — Two junior high school students working on home-made rockets in an East Edmonton backyard Wednesday were injured in separate chemical explosions. In the first explosion, Arnold Wedman, 14, suffered serious burns to his right hand. In the second, Dale Dushinski, 15, received minor injuries to his eyes when shattered glass was blown through a garbage can lid he was using as a shield.

Jobs Go Begging

EDMONTON (CP) — Lloyd Devore, director of the Alberta Ecology Corps, said there are still about 100 summer jobs available for students, but no takers.

The corps was created by the Alberta government, in part to provide student summer employment. About 1,000 students who had applied subsequently declined job offers. Another 1,300 now are working at corps jobs.

Corps students receive $250 a month basic salary, ranging up to $340, depending on where they work.

Fire Sweeps Hamlet

CHATFIELD, Man. (CP) — Residents of this Manitoba inter-lake community were roused from their beds to fight a fire with a bucket brigade, but were unable to save the hamlet's only hotel, two warehouses with merchandise, a pool hall, a garage and a truck. No one was injured in the fire, but damage was estimated at about $50,000.

Ginter Bid Wins

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ben Ginter has received the go-ahead to sell beer from his new Manitoba brewery at a lower price than other breweries now are charging.

The Public Utilities Board Thursday approved cuts that will mean a retail price for Uncle Ben's brands of $1.45 for a six-pack, $2.90 for a one-dozen case and $5.80 for a two-dozen case.

Standard retail prices now are $1.60, $3.20 and $6.40 respectively.

Five Captured

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Armed Forces' exercise Only Arm ended Thursday with thirty escaped and five captured. The exercise involved 35 paratroopers who were dropped off randomly in a 200-mile radius of Edmonton and told to make their way back to the city through "enemy territory" with no compasses or watches.

Baffling Play Borrows Threads

By AUDREY JOHNSON

No play is off-limits in the new drama festival concept as represented by the Centennial Showcase of Plays currently running at McPherson Playhouse.

The first B.C. Drama Association-sponsored festival to be non-competitive, it features plays from the nine provincial zones with no strictures on length or kind.

Thursday night, New Caledonia Players of Prince George presented a three-act piece of avant garde theatre, James Saunders' Next Time I'll Sing to You.

The play, long, rambling and self-conscious is thickly woven with clearly discernible threads borrowed, perhaps involuntarily, from the robes of other, more coherent writers.

Some BORED
Most of the audience was mystified, some were bored. But all could only have been impressed with the valiant performance of the gifted cast of five.

This appeared also to be the over-all reaction of adjudicator Gordon Peacock.

In summing up his impressions he noted that it was a most difficult piece for even an experienced professional cast. And in that context he congratulated the company for its effort.

The playwright, he said, had undoubtedly been influenced by Beckett's Waiting for Godot and Pirandello's Six Characters in Search of an Author, as well as other previous writers.

"One would wish, however, that he could have mastered the great intensity of mood and wonderful use of words that was theirs," Peacock said.

The lighting was very well handled, he commented, and the actors worked very hard.

OPEN LETTER

The Way to End Our Red Ghetto

Miss Kahn-Tineta Horn,
Caughnawaga Indian Reserve,
Montreal, Quebec.

Dear Miss Horn:

As a long-time admirer of your beauty, your bravery and your dedication to the cause of the Canadian Indian, it came as a shock and disillusionment this week to read that you've hardened your position beyond all hope of compromise.

To describe yourself as "a racist," to actively promote the sick philosophy of elective apartheid, even to the extent of proposing separate Indian cities, to defend the position that Indians are mentally, physically and culturally incapable of integration in a white society, seems to me a wholly defeatist, sadly misguided retreat.

It is fortified, God knows, by many a white man who thinks of himself as the best friend the Indian ever had. They are the well-meaning, innocently patronizing birds who nourish the mystique that the noble red man will lose what remains of his identity if he's separated from his heritage, that if he moves or is moved beyond being a barbecher of salmon, a carver of totems, a teller of legends, a beater of tribal totems, he faces oblivion.

The romantic myth that the Indian today is still motivated by a simplistic, independent, child-like yearning for the freedom of the forest is silly enough coming from a white man. When it comes from an Indian, it's even sillier.

Indian, Kahn-Tineta, when you say that "there are Indians and then there's everyone else," the forest image simply becomes a green ghetto.

You are saying, in effect, to an Indian child that even if this country comes to recognize its shame and begins to do something about it, unlikely though it may be, that child will not aspire to writing the Toronto Symphony or becoming a surgeon or astronaut or editor or prime minister or chief justice or architect or banker because it is not in his genes. That, indeed, is racism just as vicious as that of the white supremacists of South Africa.

The fact is that any child of any race, white, black, red or polka-dotted, given the equal opportunity, has as much chance as a boy or girl of any other race. Just as you, Kahn-Tineta, became a beauty contest winner and an articulate activist for your people, so any Indian child might set his sights on any goal if all things were equal.

That this is so rarely demonstrated in Canada is not to be taken as evidence that Indians are "different" or that they are either inferior or superior in their capabilities or their values.

In this province, for example, there are some 60,000 so-called "non-status" Indians. Nine of every 10 of them are on the welfare rolls. They are not unemployed because they are Indian. They are unemployed because they are human beings who have not had the advantages of education and training.

In our own Victoria area 13 per cent of all children needing foster homes are Indian although the Indian population is something like half of one per cent. The homes these children come from are not broken because they are Indian. They are broken homes because the parents have the empty, confused, oppressed lives of second-class citizens.

Few if any Indians in this part of the world aspire to be surgeons or editors or architects or the rest. Vast numbers of young Indians, in fact, are tragically locked in an iron mask of shyness, lack of self-possession, often all but totally unable to communicate except with their own people. They are not this way because they are Indian. They are this way because of the ghetto life of the reserve, because of an insular family environment, because our educational system makes little or no attempt to overcome their handicaps.

It is intimidation and oppression, in other words, and not any inherent inferiority or "difference" that makes integration into a white society so difficult. Yet without integration the Indian is surely doomed, surely destined to be overwhelmed completely.

It is an integration that could be accomplished in a single generation if Indian children were removed from their stifling environment and became the subjects of an intensive, highly specialized program to suit their needs. The rich tradition and culture of their race need not be lost in the process any more than the tradition and culture of an Irishman or Jew or Hungarian is lost in taking his rightful place in a progressive society.

You think not, Kahn-Tineta? Then I would advise you to study the Cuban "becado" experiment that began soon after Castro's revolution was consolidated, a crash scholarship program designed to bring the oppressed Cuban negro into that society.

Teams of recruiters from Havana went everywhere in the cities' slums and into the primitive huts of the country, selecting black children on the basis of aptitude tests. They were sent to the capital where, in groups of 20 or 30, they moved into the elegant homes in the Miramar district left empty by the wealthy who had fled to America. The best teachers in Cuba were assigned to the program.

Each of these groups was given an intensive general curriculum, but each specialized in some particular field. One of the most unusual was devoted to ballet. In others there were courses in engineering, motor mechanics, teaching, banking, agriculture, the fine arts, journalism, physical training, many more. The old, beautiful Nacional Hotel became one giant school of young black girls, most of whom had been domestics, studying stenographic and secretarial work.

I saw all this in my first visit to Cuba in Year One of the revolution. When I went back 10 years later I saw black dancers in featured roles in the Cuban National Ballet, black executives in many key positions through the state bureaucracy, blacks in worthwhile, purposeful functions in every conceivable line.

This was the program that United States newspapers were describing as Castro's "kidnapping" of the black children, though, in fact, they returned regularly to their homes and, very often, were educating their illiterate parents.

That, Kahn-Tineta, is how Cuba demonstrated that an "inferior" people need only opportunity and equality. Nothing less will work here with the Canadian Indian. The chances for it are remote, I agree, but to close the door irrevocably as you propose is really to abandon all hope.

In peace,
Jack Scott.

Seamen Striking For Extra Overtime Payment

30 Crewmen Walk Off Arcadia

Men Defy Desertion Charge Threat, Return to London

By PETER McNELLY

A group of 30 British seamen is flying back to London today after walking off the P and O cruise ship Arcadia in Victoria Thursday afternoon.

The men, members of the National Seamen's Union, called an unofficial strike at 4 p.m., two hours before the Arcadia left Ogden Point for San Francisco. They were striking for an extra two hours daily overtime pay.

The men, most of whom are in their early twenties, defied Capt. Anthony Dallas' last-minute threat to class them as deserters and stood happily ashore on the Canadian National Railways dock as the Arcadia sailed without them at 6:15 p.m.

Immediately, the crewmen were taken into custody of Canadian Immigration. They spent the night at the Vancouver Seamen's Mission while P and O Line assistant branch manager Ray Graves booked flight reservations for the men at company expense.

Immigration officials said today the case was simply one of repatriation, not desertion. Immigration officer Robert Reid met with Dallas before the Arcadia sailed, and the two decided desertion charges could not be laid.

Dallas told the strikers: "Regrettably, we shall have to class you as deserters and you will be referred to Canadian Immigration and you will be responsible to yourselves for your own repatriation. Have I made this clear?" Dallas told the group.

Without another word, Dallas walked back on board. "What shall we do?" said spokesman Jack Cox, 20, of Belfast. "Who will stay?"

Thirty hands went up. "Now, who wants to go back on board?"

No hands, but six men left the circle and returned to the Arcadia, the jeers of their companions following them.

Cox said the waiters earn about $220 Canadian a month, excluding tips. Their demand for two hours blanket overtime daily during the eight-week period the Arcadia was sailing between San Francisco and Alaska would compensate them for lost working time, he said.

The Arcadia can carry a maximum of 1,100 passengers, but she had booked only about 800 for the Alaskan cruise. This meant the waiters did not work full "sittings" or shifts.

The strikers said the overtime is a must if they are to make money on the cruise. Michael Blake, 25, of Liverpool, bitterly observed that he received more money on welfare than he will make on this cruise.

The men also were dissatisfied with their quarters, food and lost bonuses. They said the crew eats the passengers' leftovers supplemented by a diet of cheap pork, beans and chips.

Their quarters are dingy and cramped. Crew sleep six to 10 per room.

The crew also sought the same overtime demands for the ship's Goanese Indian waiters who earn $37 Canadian per month. Deputy Purser Richard Harris refused to confirm the wage rate for the Goanese.

But he said their pay is arranged between the company and the Indian government and is no concern to the white waiters.

"I can't understand their grievance. Every man is treated fairly and they're paid for hours worked. They've just got a bee in their bonnet about something," Harris said.

Dallas told the strikers the company's London office had discussed the dispute with NSU officials in England. He read them a company telegram which said the union asked the company to take no unofficial action until the union had a chance to investigate the complaints.

The strikers rejected the telegram because they said it had not come from the union to their local representative.

As departure time neared, the passengers lined the decks to watch the strikers on the dock.

"Stick together; we're with you," one man shouted.

Others tossed quarters and sympathetic crewmen dropped packages of ham sandwiches on the dock. One American threw down $40 in a pink jewelry case.

But Sam Lane, owner of Victoria's Olde England Inn, was giving the men a hard time down on the dock.

"You're all a bunch of lugheads," Lane said. "When I was your age I used to work for $2 a week."

"This is 1971," said one striker, who laughed at Lane and walked away.

The strikers were only a minority of the Arcadia's 450 unionized crewmen. The ship's crew totals 640.

At 5:55 p.m. a piper from the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Army Cadets struck the tune of "Green Hills."

The boys remained confident, waiting to see if Dallas would pull out. Just after 6 p.m. the gangplank was hauled aboard and the mooring lines dropped.

The strikers cheered as the tug Island Rocket gently guided the Arcadia out of the harbor. Several crewmen applauded from the decks when Cox tossed his waiter's jacket into the sea.

The strikers swapped victory signs with the departing passengers.

"When the union in London hears about this," Blake said, "every other P and O ship will have walkouts."

Taxi Fare Hike Given Approval

Victoria council's finance committee today approved an application from city taxi operators to raise fares by 25 per cent.

A delegation representing about 85 per cent of the city's taxis met with committee in a special session to discuss the application tabled Thursday because counter arguments had not been made.

If ratified by full council and approved by the Public Utilities Commission, the rates will change from 80 cents for the first quarter mile to 90 cents for the first fifth of a mile, and from 10 cents each additional quarter mile to 10 cents each additional fifth of a mile.

At Thursday's meeting, aldermen expressed concern that the fare hike would affect pensioners.

Mayor Courtney Haddock suggested today a large decrease in fares might attract more customers, but was asked in return if a decrease in hydro rates would attract more customers.

Taxi representatives said the cost of the average taxi ride would increase from about $1.50 to $1.70 under the new schedule.

Committee was also told taxi fares in Sidney have already been changed to the new rates and other applications for similar raises are being made in other Vancouver Island municipalities.

JONES NAMED LANSLOWNE PRINCIPAL

Robert E. Jones, vice-principal at Cedar Hill Junior High has been named principal at Lansdowne Junior High succeeding Donald Macdonald.

Macdonald, principal at Lansdowne for the past 14 years, becomes administrative assistant to Victor Thomson, director of secondary instruction with the Greater Victoria school board.

Victoria Police Start Work-to-Rule Campaign

Victoria city police have decided to work to rule, but deputy police chief Ray Maitland said today the public has "no cause for alarm."

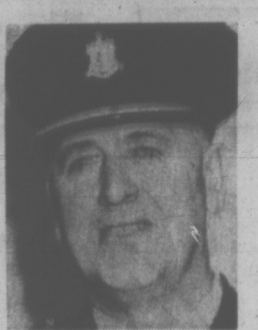

The decision to stick by the rules was made at a membership meeting of the Victoria Policemen's Union, which is seeking wage parity with Vancouver policemen in a new contract.

Union president Ken Horsman said police "have decided to provide a service according to the rules, which you might call working according to the rules." But he was not prepared to say what this means.

Maitland said "we will have to wait and see what they do" when asked what work to rule means and what effect it will have.

"I am not too concerned," he said. "I am sure they won't phirk their duty."

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, who is also chairman of the police commission which is bargaining with the union, said "if people are dissatisfied with the wages we pay, they should look for more lucrative fields of employment.

"I have great admiration for our police force. I hope they are reasonable men and they will act as such."

"No matter what their arguments, we can't consider parity with Vancouver."

The mayor also said the executive of the police union "has a job to do, to try to get the best deal for the membership. There are no hard feelings."

Victoria has offered policemen a 7½ per cent pay raise this year, the same as other municipal employees accepted. Police have rejected this, saying it will widen the existing disparity with Vancouver.

Vancouver police were awarded, in a binding arbitration decision, a 16.4 per cent pay raise this year which will increase the pay of a first-class constable to $587 a month by July 1.

Victoria police have said a 7½ per cent raise will widen the $34-a-month gap between the two cities to $104 a month by July 1.

Horsman, in comments Thursday, said police might not expose themselves to unnecessary dangers "as they often do" and legal advice is being sought "in some of the areas suggested by our members."

Horsman said earlier the work to rule situation "could progressively get worse" and that morale is "at a very extreme low, and this is bound to affect their efficiency as police officers."

41 LOCAL FAMILIES DISRUPTED, LITTLE WORK SEEN

Another Side Exists to Sunro Decision

By DON VIPOND

The men who would have worked Sunro mine near Jordan River say there's another side to this week's story of the mine being denied a permit to discharge tailings into Juan de Fuca Strait.

It's the story of 50 men who have already been laid off and the remaining four who will be. And the 100 to 125 men the mine would have employed when it went into full production.

Of the 54 men hired last fall when the mine was rehabilitated, 41 have homes and families in Greater Victoria. Some have lived in the area for years.

The families have an average of two children so the permit decision cuts right to the core of life for at least 163 men, women and children settled here.

When Discon Development Ltd. announced reactivation of the former Cowichan copper mine with financial backing from a giant French firm, the men hired at the outset were jubilant. They made plans, started additions to their homes. The payroll at the mine averaged $1,000 a man per month.

Plans and hopes vanished with a jolt Tuesday when the Pollution Control Branch announced it had rejected the mine's application to discharge up to a million gallons of effluent into the strait daily.

Lloyd Delaney, a miner and president of Local 1612 of the United Steelworkers, Alan Iverson, motorman at the mine, and Joe Kereszti, an electrician, made these points in an interview today.

Apart from the hardship which faces them and those dary $100,000 a month to the area payroll.

Money and jobs aside, they're puzzled by other questions.

Sunro, if it had achieved maximum production, would but just a few months ago granted a permit to Utah mine near Fort Hardy to pump up to 9,300,000 gallons of effluent into Rupert Inlet daily.

The strait is open with strong tidal currents. Rupert Inlet is practically landlocked, they note.

Utah's mill has a capacity of 35,000 tons a day and its effluent is concentrated. Sunro's had a capacity of 1,000 tons a day and its effluent wasn't nearly so concentrated.

The Anaconda copper mine at Britannia Beach has been dumping tailings at the edge of Howe Sound for about half a century, they add.

The fishing in Howe Sound remains good, so the Sunro men are at a loss to understand objections from commercial fishermen to the Jordan River operation.

There would have been residual traces of cyanide in the Sunro tailings but well below official safety levels.

Cyanide is used in separating mineral from rock.

Sunro can appeal the PCB's ruling on the permit but the men say the French backers are free now to pull their financing out at any time.

The question is: will they wait for an appeal?

Meanwhile, jobs are far from handy for Sunro's former mine workers.

There are only two other mines on Vancouver Island which might be able to hire a handful of the unemployed men. They are Western at Buttle Lake and Benson Lake, about 26 miles northwest of Port McNeil.

80% Water, 20% Sand: Is That Real Pollution?

like them now out of work, the whole community loses.

The mine in operation would have spent $6 million a year for supplies, equipment and services. They say it would have added a second have pumped a million gallons of mine effluent, 80 per cent water, 20 per cent rock crushed to sand, into the strait below tideline.

The Pollution Control Branch wouldn't allow that

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Gender Mix-Up

DEAR ABBY: When a New York couple visited Houston and the wife found the restrooms marked "Heifers" and "Steers," she asked her husband which one she was and you said, "If he didn't tell her she was a 'heifer' he gave her a bum steer."

Well, Abby, for your information, we Texans refer to virgin cows as "heifers," so I doubt if that man's wife would qualify as a heifer. And a steer is a neutered bull, so no self-respecting Texan would care to use facilities marked "Steer." I like the signs they use in Oregon: "Pointers" and "Setters." Ain't that a scream? — San Angelo Cattleman.

DEAR MAN: Yup. Now, let's get back to "Ladies" and "Gentlemen," shall we?

DEAR ABBY: A co-worker sent all of us girls who work with her an invitation to her wedding. But it was only an invitation to come to the church and watch her get married. There wasn't a clue as to where the reception was to be held, so I asked her. She told me that her parents were a little low on funds, so there would be a big wedding at the church, and a very small reception afterwards for relatives and a very few close friends.

All of us girls who work with this girl got together and gave her a gift. I wonder if you think it is right to invite people to a wedding and not to any kind of a reception afterward? I think it is a lot of nerve to expect guests to be satisfied to just come to a church and watch a bride walk down an aisle, especially after accepting a wedding gift. What is your opinion? — Gypsey.

DEAR GYPSEY: It's my opinion that the only reason a gift is given is because the giver wants to give it. Since you feel gypsey, in the future don't give anything until you've collected whatever it was you expected to receive in exchange. That way you'll be sure to get your money's worth.

DEAR ABBY: Can a person be a kleptomaniac without realizing it? At the place I recently started working, a certain party mentioned that she had misplaced her favorite pen. We searched and searched and couldn't find it. When I got home that evening I found a strange pen in my purse. The next day I asked the person who had lost it if that was her pen and she said it was. I was terribly embarrassed. I don't remember ever having seen that pen before, and I certainly can't remember having put it in my purse.

That's not all. A few days later someone else in the office misplaced a very pretty little desk calendar, and I found that in my purse, too! Abby, I don't steal. Is someone playing a joke on me? Or can I be a kleptomaniac? — Baffled.

DEAR BAFFLED: A "kleptomaniac" steal compulsively — but not unconsciously. Either you absent-mindedly put those items in your purse, or someone has planted them there. Suggestion: Put a mousetrap in your purse (but don't forget it's there!)

DEAR ABBY: Here's how I cured my lazy husband of leaving stuff in his pants and shirt pockets: I would go through all his pockets very carefully, removing matches, cigarettes, papers, pens and all personal belongings. These things I would put into a box on his dresser. All the money, I kept!

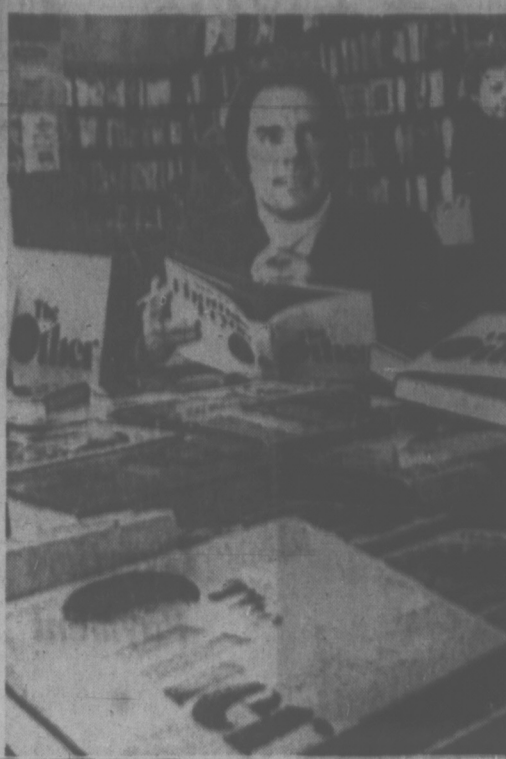

He's more careful now, but I still pick up a few bucks now and then. — Ma.

DEAR ABBY: A teen-age girl wrote: "Dear Abby, why are adults so quick to judge a person by his outward appearance? If a boy has long hair he is taken for a hippie, radical, pot smoker or a freak. Why? Adults don't bother to look beyond a person's hair or dress. They don't care what's on the inside."

Well, Abby, I am a 30-year-old high school teacher, and I would like to turn her letter around and write:

"Dear Abby, why are kids so quick to judge a person by his outward appearance? If a man has short hair he is taken for a square or a freak. Why? Kids don't bother to look beyond a person's hair or dress. They don't care what's on the inside."

To prove my point, I finally got tired of the snide remarks about my very short hair, so I let it grow longer. Quite predictably the comments have stopped, and now I am considered "normal." Strange, isn't it? — High School Teacher

SHOWN IN MORNING

Children Miss Shows

CALGARY (CP) — The quality of children's television programs came under fire at the annual meeting of the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Association organizations this week.

Delegates seemed to have no problems on agreeing on what they want in the way of programs and on when they want to see them. The 60 delegates approved resolutions to improve program quality by asking the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to repeat existing good ones or increase the number to be available in the afternoons.

Four good programs specifically mentioned were The Friendly Giant, Mr. Dress-Up, Sesame Street and Chester. These now are shown in most centres during a two-hour period in the mornings.

"There are no programs of comparable quality for children in most centres during when half the nursery school and kindergarten children are home," said a resolution prepared by the Manitoba delegation.

Delegates to the four-day meeting also criticized television commercials aimed at children and passed a resolution asking the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to regulate "this unethical type of advertising which is being accepted by the television stations they license to operate."

Other resolutions passed included:

● Recommendations that environmental education, human ecology and conservation be included in provincial curricula.

● Initiation of in-service or extension courses for teachers, administrators and parents on environmental topics and ecology.

● Request for a ban on the import and manufacture of highly inflammable materials, especially acrylic fur.

● Recommendation of a ban on television advertising of legal mood-modifying and sleep-inducing drugs.

The delegates decided to protest replacing the oath of allegiance to the Queen with an oath of fealty to Canada in the process of becoming a Canadian citizen.

In a recommendation it was said this would be a result of taking citizenship oaths out of the quasi-judicial field and putting them in the administrative process.

Delegates voted to urge the federal government not to make any such change.

During the final session Thursday they agreed to hold the next annual meeting in Vancouver.

The 75th anniversary meeting will be held in Fredericton, where the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire was formed.

Actor-Novelist Tries Hard Sell

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In a book store of any major city, the following dialogue might occur:

"Mr. Tryon, could I have your autograph?"

"Sure, you bet — if you buy a book."

Novelist Thomas Tryon, also known as actor Tom Tryon, has been criss-crossing the U.S. in the former guise, selling his new book, The Other.

"I'm absolutely shameless," he says. "I'll walk into a book store and ask if they have The Other."

"If the answer is no, I whip out my reviews and tell them how they can order it."

"If people want autographs in stores, I'll give them — on the book, that is. I sold 400 copies in one store on an autograph party."

The muscular actor-author is enjoying the euphoria of a well-received first novel. The other went into a second printing before publication, and 20th Century-Fox bought the screen rights.

Tryon's rugged good looks helped him carve out a successful career as an actor in television and films, his most noted role being the lead in The Cardinal.

"I suppose I should say I loved doing The Cardinal," he remarks, "but I didn't." In fact, most of his performances gave him little pleasure, with the exception of a Disney film, Moon Pilot, one of his few chances to perform comedy.

Tryon first penned a Hollywood story that failed. Then he turned to a macabre tale of murder and evil happenings amid a Connecticut family in the 1930s. He continued writing while making films in Europe and Australia, and two years later he completed The Other.

His publisher was delighted with the book and suggested that Tryon should go on the road to sell it.

"At first I was against it," said Tryon. "After 16 years of personal appearances to sell movies, I was fed up with that kind of selling."

"But once I got started, I was insatiable. I'll do anything to sell books."

IODE Elects Officers

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Mrs. George E. Tait of Toronto was returned as president of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire in Canada for a second term as the organization chose its officers Wednesday at the 11st annual meeting here.

The others are: Mrs. K. J. C. Dean, Toronto, first vice-president; Mrs. R. W. Adams, Toronto, first vice-president; Mrs. R. W. Adams, Toronto, second vice-president; Mrs. Reginald M. Brophy, Claremont, Ont., vice-president; Mrs. Bruce Butler, Toronto, vice-president; Mrs. Harold E. Hudson, Toronto, vice-president and Mrs. R. W. Morrison, Hamilton, vice-president.

Mrs. William G. Alexander, Toronto, secretary; Mrs. William T. Atkins, Toronto, treasurer and Mrs. Dallas T. Milne, Toronto, education secretary.

During the final session Thursday they agreed to hold the next annual meeting in Vancouver.

The 75th anniversary meeting will be held in Fredericton, where the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire was formed.

The delegates decided to protest replacing the oath of allegiance to the Queen with an oath of fealty to Canada in the process of becoming a Canadian citizen.

In a recommendation it was said this would be a result of taking citizenship oaths out of the quasi-judicial field and putting them in the administrative process.

Delegates voted to urge the federal government not to make any such change.

Men Send Sexy Messages By Rolling Shirt Sleeves

LONDON (Reuters) — The man who rolls up his shirt sleeves is projecting the same sex message as the woman who wears a plunging neckline, claims a shirt-maker.

A survey by Wenslow Shirts claimed that the way men wear shirts reveals more than hairy arms to women in the know.

She sees sleeves rolled up to the elbow as men see a slight plunge in the neckline, and a flash of biceps as a deep, deep plunge.

Many male office workers may be surprised to be told that an undone top button is the equivalent of a deliberately hoisted hemline and says: "I'm stripping for action."

A spokesman for the firm said: "The male shirt has during recent years become something of a sex symbol. Shirts have got tighter, more see-through, and altogether more attractive to the opposite sex."

sew simple

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer, When making garments out of solid colored Ban-Lon, which is the right side? I have seen it rolled both ways at our shop. One side seems to have a decided up-and-down ridge, the other side seems to have a cross weave.—Mrs. L.A.M.

Dear Mrs. L.A.M.: The easiest way to decide the right from the wrong side of these sheer tricot knits is to stretch a small area between your fingers, near the cut edge of the fabric. It will automatically roll or curl over to the right side.

I might also add a little word of advice about sewing on these fine tricot nylon fabrics (it also works with the sheerest of polyester knits), keep your fingers in front and also in back of the needle and apply a slight tension in both directions. However, be sure to allow the fabric to feed itself naturally. If the length of your stitches is not uniform, it means you are applying too much tension or stretch with your fingers.

PASTURED ON PETROLEUM

Canada Could Feed World With Yeast

By KEN KELLY

HALIFAX (CP) — Simple yeast and oil, combined under the right conditions, could produce enough edible protein to supply the world's protein requirements, Dr. Murray Moo-Young of the University of Waterloo said here.

Yeasts, higher in protein than such foods as soybeans, will "pasture" on oils, including crudes and refined, reproducing at great speed. Already, countries like Russia, Japan and France have commercial plants producing this high protein source, and there is even a yeast-protein chocolate drink available in Taiwan.

With Canada's oil resources, this country should be increasing its activity in this field, Dr. Moo-Young said at the conference of the Chemical Institute of Canada.

As a food, its great advantage is high-protein production. Even the so-called "green revolution" that has seen development of high-yield seed cannot match it in this respect.

PROTEIN STILL LACING

High-yield seeds have done great things for the production of carbohydrate foods but still leave a huge deficit in the world's protein requirements, Dr. Moo-Young said.

"Protein deficiency means brain damage, especially in the young."

There was neither the land nor the time available to increase protein supplies in the customary way by raising more cattle and other livestock.

"If we used 17 per cent of the present petroleum supply we could satisfy the protein requirements of the whole world," Dr. Young said in describing work at Waterloo with yeasts.

And this is not the only use of yeasts "feeding" on hydrocarbons.

They can be used to make heavy oils less viscous and more capable of long-distance transmission by pipeline, something the Canadian oil industry is interested in with respect to oil-bearing sands.

They might also be used to break down wood cellulose materials not biologically digestible, producing substitutes for such things as the basic sugars used in the pharmaceutical industry to produce new drugs.

Mixtures of bacteria and yeasts have been tried off Florida to clean up ocean oil spills but have failed because yeasts require the oil be available in tiny droplets rather than gooey masses, he suggested.

Floating processing plants could be developed to agitate ocean oil slicks as the yeast or bacterial agents are spread on them.

No Ordinary Convention

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Conventions are routine in this capital city of British Columbia. They come and go throughout the year with little or no fanfare and we accept them as part of the over-all picture. Nevertheless, there does occasionally come a convention that warrants a little more than casual mention. This is true of the biennial conference of the Association of Canadian Clubs, due to convene here this coming Sunday to Tuesday (June 6 to 8).

It's going to be a very busy time for the delegates. All business that has to be done is concentrated into two days. There are four business sessions, morning and afternoon during those two days.

Part of this time will be spent in plenary sessions, part in three workshops, one each for men's and women's large-city clubs and another for all other clubs mainly of a mixed nature (men and women) in cities of less than 100,000 population.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Of course, there are social events too, planned by the host clubs in Victoria, headed by Mrs. Wilfred Davenport and Mr. Jack Rowe.

There's a Sunday evening reception, sherry parties, luncheons and a dinner at which Stuart Keate, publisher of the Vancouver Sun and himself a past Canadian Club vice-president, will speak. Lieutenant-Governor J. R. Nicholson and Mrs. Nicholson will receive the delegates at a reception in Government House.

Following that reception, the host clubs have arranged what promises to be a particularly attractive gesture. Delegates will be divided into small geographically well-distributed groups and entertained in private homes and in sight-seeing.

One happening that will throw somewhat of a damper on the proceedings is the fact that Eric Morse, well-respected national director since 1948, retires this month. He will make his adieu at the conference.

FOSTER PATRIOTISM

These men wanted to be more active, better informed Canadians; they gathered together in a little tea room to engage in studies and discussions among themselves. They stated in their constitution that they were out to foster patriotism and help implement the ideals of Confederation and Canadian unity.

In 1897, the idea spread to Toronto, and very soon became a movement spanning the country. Since then both men's and women's clubs have worked toward the objective of a united Canada.

They have fostered Canadian art, culture and authorship and Canadian citizenship ceremonies, promoted exercise of the franchise, established bursaries and special lectureships on Canada. They have helped to assimilate new Canadians, prepared new Canadians for citizenship, discussed current affairs and commemorated local historical events.

IDEAL FORUM

The established program of meetings with speakers is deliberately planned to get the largest audience possible and representing a good cross-section of the country. Such an audience provides an ideal forum of Canadian citizens, of all political and religious faiths and a wide range of social and economic viewpoints.

As this great cross-section of Canadians learn more about other parts of the country, about important national issues while they are timely and about Canada's position in the world — and all this from a variety of viewpoints, the association believes we have one of the most practical ways to unify the country and to further the process of nationhood.

You can see that the conference this weekend is no run-of-the-mill affair. It's a golden opportunity not only for the delegates but for all members of Canadian Clubs to learn more about their country and also to meet and talk with like-minded men and women from across the land.

'Leave Them Alone'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Young people occupying the Four Seasons' property near Stanley Park should be left alone, Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver and District Labor Council, said Thursday.

"Evictions from the site are unwarranted and would be detrimental to police morale and create a confrontation atmosphere," he said.

About 40 young persons have been occupying the site, night and day since Saturday, setting up what they call "all-seasons park" as a protest against plans for a giant hotel, commercial and apartment development there.

A 43-year-old man was given a suspended sentence and placed on a one-year probation Thursday by Judge William Ostler for five counts of turning in false alarms in the city.

Ostler noted that the accused, John Sheekleton, of no fixed address, used the offences as a technique to gain attention.

The judge said he thought jail was the right place but added that there was "no cozy, little place where this man can go and be looked after forever and ever."

Sheekleton earlier pleaded guilty to turning in false alarms to the city fire department March 23, March 28, and April 9 from a Belmont Road address.

He also pleaded guilty to setting off a false alarm at the box at Quadra and North Park May 19.

Paul Michael Frank 18, of 740 Audley, was fined $200 and had his licence suspended when he pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension.

He was arrested about 5:30 a.m. Thursday after he was observed driving on Walnut less than an hour after his licence was suspended for 24 hours.

John C. Hitchcock, 19, of Royal Roads Military College, was fined $350 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving. Robinson also prohibited the accused from driving for three months.

CHIEF INDIAN CARVER WINS TOTEM CONTEST

Henry Hunt, chief carver at Thunderbird Park, is among the three winners of the B.C. Centennial '71 totem pole contest.

The others are James Dick of the Nimpkish Indian Band, a resident of Alert Bay, and Oscar Matlipi of North Vancouver.

Names of winners were announced today by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, chairman of the B.C. First Citizens' Fund, and L. J. Wallace, general chairman of the provincial centennial committee.

Mayor Not Worried By Plunkett Report

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C., says he doesn't think the Plunkett Report will have "any significant effect" on debenture sales.

He was replying to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell who, angered by criticism of provincial financial aid to municipalities, said the attacks could hurt future sales of debentures by the authority.

"World-wide market conditions will have a far greater bearing on that because the province is strong financially. It's just that municipalities aren't getting the financial assistance from the provincial government that they deserve," Curtis said.

The Plunkett Report on municipal-provincial financial relationships, released Tuesday by the Union of B.C. Municipalities, said local government faces "disastrous developments" unless the province assumes all welfare costs and a greater share of education costs.

Curtis, a former UBCM president, was directly involved at the time the study was commissioned.

He also said the report would "bring into question" a comment by Premier Bennett that B.C. municipalities get a greater share of the tax dollar than any municipalities in the rest of Canada.

Campbell said that in terms of "bookkeeping ... of surplus and revenue funds, the municipalities of this province aren't equalled anywhere."

Curtis replied that T. J. Plunkett, of Montreal has "no axe to grind" and is an eminent authority on municipal finance.

"He simply looked at the data and came up with his conclusions. I'm sorry if the premier and the minister don't like the findings," he said.

Langford Dump Owner Seeks Permit

The owner of a controversial dump in Langford has applied to the Pollution Control Board for a permit to discharge refuse on to 70 acres near 2015 Millstream Road.

Objections may be made in writing to the director of pollution control within 30 days.

The application for a permit by Glen Raymond states that the quantity of refuse to be discharged is 500 cubic yards average per day.

A continuous operating season is planned and the characteristics of the refuse "shall be domestic excluding garbage, commercial and industrial."

The application also states that refuse will be packed and covered with soil or gravel.

HAZARDS CHARGED

At a recent meeting of the Capital Regional District's public works committee, there were charges that the dump is a fire, pollution and health hazard. Langford representative Earl Pallister said a fire has been burning at the dump for a long time and houses are infested with rats.

Raymond replied that there is no problem, that he has spent $2,000 as a safeguard against fires plus a sprinkler system and the dump isn't responsible for any rodent problem.

He also said if his dump is closed, the Highland district will be littered with junk.

The regional district has no direct authority in the matter, and Raymond's application includes a statement from district engineer Bill Gerry that there is no conflict with local bylaws.

Welfare Bums In Minority

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Health Minister John Munro said Wednesday there are undoubtedly "bums" collecting welfare in Canada, but the vast majority of recipients are deserted wives, the disabled and persons in real need of help.

Mr. Munro was commenting in an interview on resolutions approved by the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves, which ended a convention in North Bay Wednesday. The association proposed that laws be passed for force able-bodied people on welfare to work on municipal projects.

Mr. Munro said he was sure that municipalities would find only a small percentage of welfare recipients unwilling to work if they were able.

By exaggerating the number of "bums," he said, the mayors and reeves are "casting aspersions on those people who need this money, who want to work but can't."

Flower Baskets to Be Hung Sunday

Summer comes to Victoria Sunday — complete with hanging flower baskets and open-air concerts.

Beginning at midnight, the city's park crews will begin hanging the flower baskets on light standards in the downtown area. By the time Monday's crews report for work 600 baskets will be in place.

This will be the 34th year that the city's parks department has hung the baskets. Over the years numerous plants have been tested for suitability, blooming time, and sequence of blooming so as to provide the longest floral display.

This year's baskets will each have 25 plants, including petunias, lobelia, tagetes, geraniums and schizanthus.

SCHOOL BANDS

Two school bands will combine forces under the direction of Emile Michaux to present a concert at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the Cameron Band Shell at Beacon Hill Park.

They are Arbutus Junior and Mount Douglas Senior

Secondary bands. Master of ceremonies will be Jim Moyle.

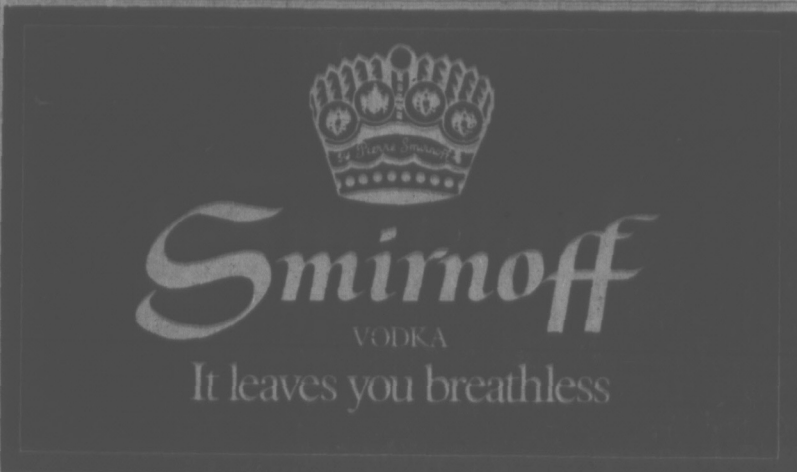

Rated one of the top secondary bands in Canada, Arbutus was the winner of the B.C. Centennial band championship.

Mount Douglas was top marching band in the Victoria Day parade and received a superior rating in the recent Victoria Music Festival.

The Arbutus band will play during the first half of the program, to be followed, after intermission, by Mount Douglas.

Clay Pots Better Than Plastic

By HILDA BEASTALL

The controversy as to which is the superior, clay flower pots or plastic (and similar materials), is likely to continue so long as a clay pot remains unbroken. Gardeners with a good stock of various sizes in clay guard them jealously, for new ones are high in price and some sizes not easy to find.

For 25 years a real idler was among our collection. This treasure had a small rolled edge, the name of the old flower-pot makers of Sankey, at Nottingham, England, stamped into it, as well as a clearly legible date around the 1850s.

These old English clay pots were of a different mixture to the ones produced in Victoria. They were not easily chipped or cracked, nor were they readily split by frost when wet.

They were durable, as evident by the fact that some still exist.

The merits of clay pots include their porosity, allowing an exchange of both air and water from inside to outside, and in reverse.

This is beneficial to plant roots, therefore beneficial to plant growth. It is also a safeguard against overwatering.

A plastic pot retains the moisture within the soil since only the surface area is exposed to the air; therefore the pot will need watering less often.

Difficulties arise for the home gardener when several dozens of pot plants are grown in assorted pots and kept in one greenhouse or other area. He is inclined to use the same mixture of soil for all the pots, clay or plastic, the same type and quantity of drainage, and the same frequency of watering.

This will soon be disastrous for the plants.

To overcome these difficulties, remember that a soil mix for plastic pots must be more porous; that is, water must drain away more freely through the bottom holes (note, there are often four drainage holes in plastic to one in a clay pot).

Add more coarse sand to the compost for faster drainage, but see that the compost has a higher percentage of fibre to retain some of the moisture.

Check plastic pots daily for watering needs. The gardener will learn the relative weight of the different pots when wet or dry.

Summing up—plastic pots are now cheaper to buy, lighter in weight to handle, need watering less often, and are easier to clean.

Clay pots allow air and moisture to pass two ways, thus encouraging earlier root action in young plants, retain warmth for a longer period, rarely remain waterlogged if proper drainage is used.

An assortment of clay and plastic pots in a beginner's plant collection is not advised, because of the variation in watering needs.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

This deal features that quality of "timing" which is so essential in all competitive endeavors. The hand arose in a high-stake rubber-bridge game.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The bidding was top-notch. Having passed originally, North's jump to three hearts was fully justified. South, feeling that a slam might exist, now made the cue-bid of four clubs, showing the ace (or, in theory, a void). North responded in kind, showing the ace of diamonds.

South, having made his slam try, simply bid four hearts next. North, appreciating that South's four club bid was a slam try (if South were interested in just a game, he would have bid four hearts instead), now showed his ace of spades by bidding that suit. Having heard that north had first-round control of spades, South then contracted for the small slam.

After capturing the opening club lead with his ace, a non-expert might have assumed that the success of the contract depended on a winning spade finesse. That such was not the case as neatly demonstrated by our South declarer.

At trick two, a diamond was led to dummy's ace, after which South ruffed a diamond with his king of trumps. Next came the three of hearts to dummy's eight. A third diamond lead was now ruffed with the heart queen. Entering dummy via the trump nine, South ruffed a fourth lead of diamonds. The board's jack of diamonds had just become the sole surviving diamond in the deck.

The queen of spades was then laid down to entice West into covering with the king if West possessed that card. When West played low, South overtook the queen with the board's ace. On the jack of diamonds South discarded his losing club. A spade was then led, and East's king took the only trick the defenders made.

It is obvious that if declarer had taken the spade finesse earlier in the play, he would have lost a spade and a club trick. But, as is—equally obvious, he "timed" his play perfectly by staying away from the spade suit until he had established dummy's fifth diamond.

Fun with figures

Greg took the sheet of paper over to where Tom was reading. "Look, Dad," he said. "I've drawn a triangle, and its area in square inches is the same as the total of its sides."

"That's interesting," his father commented. "Did you figure out the sides?"

"Sure," the boy droned. "One side is an inch longer than the shortest, and the other is one inch shorter than twice the shortest."

What were those sides?

THE WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The storm centre which has been drifting back and forth over the northwestern states for the past week or so is continuing to pump moist air over southern sections of the province and the cloud cover is preventing the sun from bringing daytime temperatures up to normal values for this time of year. Little change in the weather pattern is seen through Saturday.

LONG-DISTANCE CALLS
IN EAST INCREASED

MONTREAL (CP) — Bell Canada will increase most long-distance charges Sunday when a new rate schedule comes into effect.

At the same time, the company is introducing a direct-dial one-minute charge that will replace the current mandatory three-minute charge.

A Bell Canada spokesman said the biggest increases will affect late evening and Sunday calls. There are two peak periods for long-distance calls, at about 10 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.

Callers using the phone for less than a minute will be able to save on their bills. After that, charges are higher.

During the mid-morning peak period on weekdays there are only slight increases.

Generally higher rates will be charged for operator-handled calls.

The new schedule will affect all calls within Quebec, Ontario, and parts of Labrador and the Northwest Territories.

B.C. Hydro Picket Line Halts Jordan River Work

Striking B.C. Hydro electricians today set up pickets at their Jordan River work site, halting work on dam and construction projects as about 130 other tradesmen respected the pickets.

The electricians, striking for higher wages, were also out at Prince George, where about 100 line maintenance personnel, servicemen and other staff did not work.

The Jordan River pickets were set up at 6:30 a.m. today, affecting work at the Elliot dam, Jordan River dam and a generating station project. Construction workers were most affected by the pickets.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the union representing the electricians, is conducting a series of rotating strikes to further their pay demands. Negotiations with B.C. Hydro broke off late last week.

Burnaby was the first centre hit, when workers stayed off Wednesday. Workers at Jordan River and Williams Lake stayed off Thursday.

NOT UNION MEN

IREW president Tom Forlin said today from Vancouver that loggers and truckers at Jordan River, who are not union men, respected the pickets.

He said the workers at Prince George were mainly concerned with maintenance on the power system but would not reveal if the strike would continue at Prince George Monday.

Forlin said the Jordan River electricians would "likely be back at work on Monday."

FURTHER ORDERS

However, John Hiebert, local union spokesman at Jordan River, said he was awaiting further orders from union headquarters.

"At the present time, it's the one-day deal," he said. "But it could very likely run the weekend."

"We're awaiting orders from the other end," he said.

B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said Thursday night the spot strikes had not affected service and that no negotiations had been set up between the two parties.

He said the efforts of an independent arbitrator would be futile, as mediator Clark Gilmour, whom he described as "one of the best in the business," had not been able to settle the dispute.

Hydro has offered a 31.5 per cent increase over three years, approximately seven per cent per year.

The union says it lowered its demands to 18½ per cent over two years, or about nine per cent per year.

Shrum said, "My position is perfectly clear. These employees are already the mandarins of our work force, the highest paid of them all."

"They would remain the highest paid with only a modest increase in their contract," he said. "The seven per cent offer would put them still further ahead. That is why we can't afford to give them more than we have given other unions in recent negotiations."

Hydro electricians are now paid $5.38 hourly.

ONTARIO Premier William Davis today withdrew his request for discussion of economic problems at the June 14-16 Victoria talks after the federal government agreed to an Ottawa meeting of provincial finance ministers in July to discuss the June 18 budget.

NATO BACKS CANADA IDEA FOR E. EUROPEAN ENVOY

LISBON (CP) — A two-day meeting of NATO foreign ministers ended today with an indication of general support for a Canadian recommendation that a special envoy be appointed to evaluate recent Soviet proposals for mutual East-West force reductions in Europe.

The ministers qualified their support in a communiqué by stating that such an envoy should be named only if it becomes clear that the move would be effective in clarifying Soviet intentions.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada had hoped for a somewhat more rapid appointment.

The meeting also agreed to a United States call for a special NATO conference of deputy foreign ministers—probably in September—to discuss details of possible talks with the Soviet-led Warsaw pact on force reductions. Ministers expressed the intention to move to negotiations as soon as practicable.

Regular diplomatic channels should be used for the time being to assess Soviet motives, the communiqué said. Results of these exploratory contacts would be examined at the special meeting in Brussels.

NO IMMEDIATE STEP

Sources say the appointment of an envoy would probably take place some time after the Brussels conference if this appeared necessary.

Following exploratory discussions, the communiqué said, the alliance is prepared to work out the time, place, arrangements and agenda for

East-West talks. Sources say the appointment of a special representative to Eastern Europe depends largely on whether this method of consultation would be acceptable to the Russians.

No names had been mentioned in connection with the appointment of an envoy, sources said. Manlio Brosio, retiring NATO secretary-general, has been mentioned unofficially as a possible appointee to the position.

The communiqué also appears to rule out a European security conference called for by the Soviet Union, until a satisfactory conclusion is reached in four-power talks on Berlin.

This decision follows closely a report on the Berlin situation presented to the meeting

10,000 BIRDS KILLED BY MAJOR OIL SLICK

LERWICK, Scotland (AP) — An oil slick floating off the Shetland Islands may have killed 10,000 sea birds, experts estimated today.

Dr. William Bourne of Aberdeen University said 1,000 bodies of oil-contaminated birds had been found but "much of the isolated cliff coastline has not been searched and the figure could be as high as 10,000."

Most of the dead birds were razorbills, puffins and guillemots.

Major Wheat Sale To Russia Signed

Immediate Shipping Start

Times News Services
OTTAWA — A new sale of 81,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat to Russia for approximately $145 million was announced today.

In addition, Russia will take another 38,400,000 bushels under terms of the 1966 contract and an option to buy 10 million more bushels in 1972.

The whole package is up to 130 million bushels for a maximum $235 million.

Canadian and Soviet representatives signed a contract in the Senate reading room.

Impigration Minister Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, announced the contract in the Commons soon after the signing.

Delivery of the wheat will begin this month and continue through 1972. The major portion will be shipped during the rest of this year and the early part of next.

Mr. Lang and Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said in a joint statement that the sale involves two contracts.

The first is for 38,400,000 bushels to complete the outstanding purchase obligation under the 1966 Canada-Russia wheat agreement.

The second covers 81,500,000 bushels, an additional sale. Of the total, 350,000 tons will be shipped in the form of flour.

The first contract amount will be shipped this year, the second this year and next.

OPTION TO BUY MORE

Russia has the option to purchase a further 250,000 metric tons for shipment during May-July next year.

Shipments will be made from both Pacific and Eastern ports. Russia will have the option of taking some of the shipments through Churchill, Man., during the 1971 navigation season.

The sale of the 81.5 million bushels is considerably less than other sales to Russia in the past, the biggest being the 1966 Canada-Russia agreement.

COMPLETES 1966 PACT

In that year, Russia contracted to buy 330 million bushels during a three-year period. At the end of three years 128 million bushels remained to be bought under the agreement.

On Dec. 15, 1969, the Russians agreed to buy the remaining 128 million bushels—worth about $200 million at the time.

Mr. Lang said then that about 75 million would be delivered before the end of 1970 with the remaining 53 million to be delivered before the end of 1971.

CASE OF BEER MAY COST $3.15

If B.C. breweries have their way, the province's beer drinkers could be hit by another 25-cent a case increase on top of the recently announced 20-cent a case government increase.

This would put the price of beer at $3.15 a case.

Don McDougall, vice-president of Labatt's B.C. Ltd., said Thursday that the breweries were disappointed not to receive any of this week's 20-cent government increase.

He said Labatt's is reviewing its whole price pricing system, adding that the breweries have been able to keep their prices down by increasing plant efficiency.

"I don't think we can do this much longer," he said.

Prince George brewer Ben Ginter said Thursday the major brewers have approached him about a price hike. "They have been feeling me out to know if I'd go along with a price increase," he said.

Spokesmen for Carlings and Canadian breweries also said prices are being reviewed by their companies but no application has yet been made to the B.C. Liquor Control Board for an increase.

Ginter said brewers are giving greatly increased labor costs as the reason for wanting the price increase.

U.S. Jobless Total For May Hits 6.2%

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Unemployment in the United States rose to 6.2 per cent last month, matching last December's nine-year high.

It compared with 6.1 per cent in April and left 4,394,000 persons out of jobs, compared with 3,384,000 for the same period a year ago.

Since December the jobless level has fluctuated between 5.8 per cent and 6.2 per cent, but the trend has been upwards for the last three months.

THREE CARS DROP INTO CREVICE; 2 DEAD

LYTTON (CP) — A man and woman were killed and five persons injured today when three cars dropped into a 40-foot crevice on Highway 12, nine miles east of Lillooet. No names were released.

An RCMP spokesman said the cars apparently drove into the crevice after 150 feet of roadway gave way and slid down an embankment. The third car involved was an RCMP cruiser.

The spokesman said the policeman escaped injury and the other injuries were not serious.

Nixon To Free Oil Flow

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon said today the United States is "prepared to move promptly to permit Canadian crude oil" to enter the U.S. on an unlimited basis. But there appeared to be some strings attached to the idea.

Putting the presidential seal of approval on some form of continental policy, the president said "the time has come to develop further this mutually advantageous trading relationship" in energy.

To some observers the suggestion seemed, as one put it, "the same old story" although it now has been given the prestige of presidential endorsement. Canadian officials have shied away from the continental energy idea under which there would be a virtually unlimited across-the-border exchange of energy from many sources.

Actually the president's brief remarks on Canada took only about 100 words in a 4,000-word message to Congress advocating a whole range of long-term and short-term policies to promote "clean energy" in the future.

READY TO PROCEED

Referring to the "mutually advantageous trading relationship" in energy, the president added:

"The United States is therefore prepared to move promptly to permit Canadian crude oil to enter this country free of any quantitative restraints, upon agreement as to measures needed to prevent citizens of both our countries from being subjected to oil shortages, or threats of shortages. We are ready to proceed with negotiations and we look to an early conclusion."

Although Nixon did not mention the continental concept, administration officials made it clear they were talking beyond mere oil imports.

Asked if the president's wording implied U.S. dissatisfaction with the pace of Canada-U.S. talks on oil and other energy sources, a high U.S. official said:

"I'm not going to address myself to that except to say we feel the talks could go forward much faster."

REQUEST MORE FUNDS

Nixon said he will seek from Congress appropriations to speed up programs to increase the United States' energy supply.

These programs would emphasize development of new offshore oil, geothermal power, oil shale, coal gasification and atomic plants.

He called for an additional $27 million to accelerate research on a "liquid metal fast breeder reactor" with the goal of constructing a demonstration plant by 1980.

An additional $5 million will be requested, he said, toward the construction of the plant itself.

Federal officials told reporters in a briefing that achievement of commercial energy production from the new generation of atomic plants probably would cost the government some $2 billion over a decade, and private industry later would have to invest perhaps three times that much in plants.

Rural Area 'Kiss of Death' Seen in New Winnipeg Act

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Will the promise of a better quality of life in Greater Winnipeg lead to a mass exodus from the farms into the city?
Wally McKenzie (PC-Roblin) said in the Manitoba legislature Thursday it will and predicted that carrying out the Greater Winnipeg Act would be "the kiss of death for rural Manitoba."

It was part of a cool reception by opposition members as the NDP government introduced for second reading its bill to reorganize Greater Winnipeg.

Problems of a provincial capital city also were featured in the Ontario legislature where the government announced a decision to halt the controversial Spadina Expressway on which $80 million already has been spent.

CALLS IT DISASTER

The cabinet decision was called a disaster by Albert Campbell, Metropolitan Toronto's chairman, who said it could reverse everything done in the last 18 years to develop Metropolitan Toronto.

He called it "the most serious decision with the most serious consequence" he had ever known a provincial government to make.

The opposition view was expressed by Jane Jacobs, an authority on urban planning and a leader of the Stop Spadina movement which originated the fight against the expressway.

"I'm delighted," said Jacobs. "It indicates what I thought all along about Canadian sanity. Canada is a very sane place."

The Manitoba bill would replace the existing 12 municipalities and the 11-year-old Metropolitan Council of Greater Winnipeg with a single central council of 50 members.

Delivery of local services would be supervised by 13 community committees functioning in areas roughly corresponding to existing municipal boundaries.

"We hope we will have a local government and city that is the envy of the continent," said Urban Affairs Minister Saul Cherniack.

In Quebec, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette told the national assembly the province will not ban privately sponsored festivals on St. Jean Baptiste Day.

He said municipalities must establish their own regulations to maintain order in their own territory. June 24 is the provincial holiday for French-Canadians.

Mayors of communities near Quebec City wanted festivals forbidden because they feared a repetition of last year's pop music festival at Manseau, 40 miles southwest of Quebec City where a large number of persons were treated for bad drug trips.

DAM TO IMPROVE SKAGIT VALLEY?

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP)—Witnesses testifying before the International Joint Commission disagreed sharply Thursday on what effects raising Ross Dam would have on the Canadian ecology.

Arthur Lang, spokesman for Seattle City Light, said the utility's plan to raise the dam 122.5 feet actually would improve the recreational value of the Skagit Valley, which extends into British Columbia. But a spokesman for the North Cascade Conservation Council said just the opposite would be true.

City Light has asked permission to raise the dam to 1,725 feet, a move that would produce additional power equal to 20 per cent of Seattle's annual power requirement but flood sections of Skagit Valley in B.C.

Christian Herter Jr., special assistant secretary of state for environmental affairs and head of the U.S. delegation, said the IJC is limited in scope to determining what effect the higher dam would have on the Canadian environment.

The hearings moved to Vancouver for additional hearings today and Saturday.

OPEN LETTER

The Way to End Our Red Ghetto

Miss Kahn-Tineta Horn,
Caughnawaga Indian Reserve,
Montreal, Quebec.

Dear Miss Horn:

As a long-time admirer of your beauty, your bravery and your dedication to the cause of the Canadian Indian, it came as a shock and disillusionment this week to read that you've hardened your position beyond all hope of compromise.

To describe yourself as "a racist," to actively promote the sick philosophy of elective apartheid, even to the extent of proposing separate Indian cities, to defend the position that Indians are mentally, physically and culturally incapable of integration in a white society, seems to me a wholly defeatist, sadly misguided retreat.

It is fortified, God knows, by many a white man who thinks of himself as the best friend the Indian ever had. They are the well-meaning, innocently patronizing birds who nourish the mystique that the noble red man will lose what remains of his identity if he's separated from his heritage, that if he moves or is moved beyond being a barbecuer of salmon, a carver of totems, a teller of legends, a beater of tribal totems, he faces oblivion.

The romantic myth that the Indian today is still motivated by a simplistic, independent, child-like yearning for the freedom of the forest is silly enough coming from a white man. When it comes from an Indian, Kahn-Tineta, when you say that "there are Indians and then there's everyone else," the forest image simply becomes a green ghetto.

You are saying, in effect, to an Indian child that even if this country comes to recognize its shame and begins to do something about it, unlikely though it may be, that child will not aspire to writing the great Canadian novel or running an industry or leading the Toronto Symphony or becoming a surgeon or astronaut or editor or prime minister or chief justice or architect or banker because it is not in his genes. That, indeed, is racism just as vicious as that of the white supremacists of South Africa.

The fact is that any child of any race, white, black, red or polka-dotted, given the equal opportunity, has as much chance as a boy or girl of any other race. Just as you, Kahn-Tineta, became a beauty contest winner and an articulate activist for your people, so any Indian child might set his sights on any goal if all things were equal.

That this is so rarely demonstrated in Canada is not to be taken as evidence that Indians are "different" or that they are either inferior or superior in their capabilities or their values.

In this province, for example, there are some 60,000 so-called "non-status" Indians. Nine of every 10 of them are on the welfare rolls. They are not unemployed because they are Indian. They are unemployed because they are human beings who have not had the advantages of education and training.

In our own Victoria area 13 per cent of all children needing foster homes are Indian although the Indian population is something like half of one per cent. The homes these children come from are not broken because they are Indian. They are broken homes because the parents have the empty, confused, oppressed lives of second-class citizens.

Few if any Indians in this part of the world aspire to be surgeons or editors or architects or the rest. Vast numbers of young Indians, in fact, are tragically locked in an iron mask of shyness, lack of self-possession, often all but totally unable to communicate except with their own people. They are not this way because they are Indian. They are this way because of the ghetto life of the reserve, because of an insular family environment, because our educational system makes little or no attempt to overcome their handicaps.

It is intimidation and oppression, in other words, and not any inherent inferiority or "difference" that makes integration into a white society so difficult. Yet without integration the Indian is surely doomed, surely destined to be overwhelmed completely.

It is an integration that could be accomplished in a single generation if Indian children were removed from their stultifying environment and became the subjects of an intensive, highly specialized program to suit their needs. The rich tradition and culture of their race need not be lost in the process any more than the tradition and culture of an Irishman or Jew or Hungarian is lost in taking his rightful place in a progressive society.

You think not, Kahn-Tineta? Then I would advise you to study the Cuban "besado" experiment that began soon after Castro's revolution was consolidated, a crash scholarship program designed to bring the oppressed Cuban negro into that society.

Teams of recruiters from Havana went everywhere in the cities' slums and into the primitive backwoods of the country, selecting black children on the basis of aptitude tests. They were sent to the capital where, in groups of 20 or 30, they moved into the elegant homes in the Miramar district left empty by the wealthy who had fled to America. The best teachers in Cuba were assigned to the program.

Each of these groups was given an intensive general curriculum, but each specialized in some particular field. One of the most unusual was devoted to ballet. In others there were courses in engineering, motor mechanics, teaching, banking, agriculture, the fine arts, journalism, physical training, many more. The old, beautiful Nacional Hotel became one giant school of young black girls, most of whom had been domestics, studying stenography and secretarial work.

I saw all this in my first visit to Cuba in Year One of the revolution. When I went back 10 years later I saw black dancers in featured roles in the Cuban National Ballet, black executives in many key positions through the state bureaucracy, blacks in worthwhile, purposeful functions in every conceivable line.

This was the program that United States newspapers were describing as Castro's "kidnapping" of the black children, though, in fact, they returned regularly to their homes and, very often, were educating their illiterate parents.

That, Kahn-Tineta, is how Cuba demonstrated that an "inferior" people need only opportunity and equality. Nothing less will work here with the Canadian Indian. The chances for it are remote, I agree, but to close the door irrevocably as you propose is really to abandon all hope.

In peace,
Jack Scott.

30 Crewmen Walk Off Arcadia

Men Defy Desertion Charge Threat, Return to London

By PETER MCNELLY

A group of 30 British seamen is flying back to London today after walking off the P and O cruise ship Arcadia in Victoria Thursday afternoon.

The men, members of the National Seamen's Union, called an unofficial strike at 4 p.m., two hours before the Arcadia left Ogden Point for San Francisco. They were striking for an extra two hours daily overtime pay.

The men, most of whom are in their early twenties, defied Capt. Anthony Dallas' last-minute threat to class them as deserters and stood happily ashore on the Canadian National Railways dock as the Arcadia sailed without them at 6:15 p.m.

Immediately, the crewmen were taken into custody of Canadian Immigration. They spent the night at the Vancouver Seamen's Mission while P and O Line assistant branch manager Ray Graves booked flight reservations for the men at company expense.

Immigration officials said today the case was simply one of repatriation, not desertion. Immigration officer Robert Reid met with Dallas before the Arcadia sailed, and the two decided desertion charges could not be laid. Dallas told the strikers: "Regrettably, we shall have to class you as deserters and you will be referred to Canadian Immigration and you will be responsible to yourselves for your own repatriation. Have I made this clear?" Dallas told the group.

Without another word, Dallas walked back on board. "What shall we do?" said spokesman Jack Cox, 20, of Belfast. "Who will stay?"

Thirty hands went up. "Now, who wants to go back on board?"

No hands, but six men left the circle and returned to the Arcadia, the jeers of their companions following them.

Cox said the waiters earn about $220 Canadian a month, excluding tips. Their demand for two hours blanket overtime daily during the eight-week period the Arcadia was sailing between San Francisco and Alaska would compensate them for lost working time, he said.

The Arcadia can carry a maximum of 1,100 passengers, but she had booked only about 800 for the Alaskan cruise. This meant the waiters did not work full "sittings" or shifts.

The strikers said the overtime is a must if they are to make money on the cruise. Michael Blake, 25, of Liverpool, bitterly observed that he received more money on welfare than he will make on this cruise.

The men also were dissatisfied with their quarters, food and lost bonuses. They said the grey suits the passengers' left-overs supplemented by a diet of cheap pork, beans and chips.

Their quarters are dingy and cramped. Crew sleep six to 10 per room. The crew also sought the same overtime demands for the ship's Goanese Indian waiters who earn $37 Canadian per month. Deputy Purser Richard Harris refused to confirm the wage-rate for the Goanese.

But he said their pay is arranged between the company and the Indian government and is no concern to the white waiters.

"I can't understand their grievance. Every man is treated fairly and they're paid for hours worked. They've just got a bee in their bonnet about something," Harris said.

Dallas told the strikers the company's London office had discussed the dispute with NSU officials in England. He read them a company telegram which said the union asked the company to take no unofficial action until the union had a chance to investigate the complaints.

The strikers rejected the telegram because they said it had not come from the union to their local representative. As departure time neared, the passengers lined the decks to watch the strikers on the dock.

"Stick together; we're with you," one man shouted. Others tossed quarters and sympathetic crewmen dropped packages of ham sandwiches on the dock. One American threw down $40 in a pink jewelry case.

But Sam Lane, owner of Victoria's Olde England Inn, was giving the men a hard time down on the dock.

"You're all a bunch of lugheads," Lane said. "When I was your age I used to work for $2 a week."

"This is 1971," said one striker, who laughed at Lane and walked away.

The strikers were only a minority of the Arcadia's 450 unionized crewmen. The ship's crew totals 640.

At 5:55 p.m. a piper from the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Army Cadets struck the tune of "Green Hills."

The boys remained confident, waiting to see if Dallas would pull out. Just after 6 p.m. the gangplank was hauled aboard and the mooring lines dropped.

The strikers cheered as the tug Island Rocket gently guided the Arcadia out of the harbor. Several crewmen applauded from the decks when Cox tossed his waiter's jacket into the sea.

The strikers swapped victory signs with the departing passengers.

"When the union in London hears about this," Blake said, "every other P and O ship will have walkouts."

Taxi Fare Hike Given Approval

Victoria council's finance committee today approved an application from city taxi operators to raise taxi fares.

A delegation representing about 85 per cent of the city's taxis met with committee in a special session to discuss the application tabled Thursday because counter arguments had not been made.

If ratified by full council and approved by the Public Utilities Commission, the rates will change from 80 cents for the first quarter mile to 90 cents for the first fifth of a mile, and from 10 cents each additional quarter mile to 10 cents each additional fifth of a mile.

At Thursday's meeting, aldermen expressed concern that the fare hike would affect pensioners.

Mayor Courtney Haddock suggested today a large decrease in fares might attract more customers, but was asked in return if a decrease in hydro rates would attract more customers.

Taxi representatives said the cost of the average taxi ride would increase from about $1.50 to $1.70 under the new schedule.

Committee was also told taxi fares in Sidney have already been changed to the new rates and other applications for similar raises are being made in other Vancouver Island municipalities.

41 LOCAL FAMILIES DISRUPTED, LITTLE WORK SEEN

Another Side Exists to Sunro Decision

By DON VIPOND

The men who would have worked Sunro mine near Jordan River say there's another side to this week's story of the mine being denied a permit to discharge tailings into Juan de Fuca Strait.

It's the story of 50 men who have already been laid off and the remaining four who will be. And the 100 to 125 men the mine would have employed when it went into full production.

Of the 54 men hired last fall when the mine was rehabilitated, 41 have homes and families in Greater Victoria. Some have lived in the area for years.

The families have an average of two children so the permit decision cuts right to the core of life for at least 163 men, women and children settled here.

When Dison Development Ltd. announced reactivation of the former Cowichan copper mine with financial backing from a giant French firm, the men hired at the outset were jubilant. They made plans, started additions to their homes. The payroll at the mine averaged $1,000 a man per month.

Plans and hopes vanished with a jolt Tuesday when the Pollution Control Branch announced it had rejected the mine's application to discharge up to a million gallons of effluent into the strait daily.

Lloyd Delaney, a miner and president of Local 1012 of the United Steelworkers, Alan Iverson, motorman at the mine, and Joe Kereszti, an electrician, made these points in an interview today.

Apart from the hardship which faces them and those dary $100,000 a month to the area payroll.

Money and jobs aside, they're puzzled by other questions.

Sunro, if it had achieved maximum production, would but just a few months ago granted a permit to Utah mine near Port Hardy to pump up to 9,300,000 gallons of effluent into Rupert Inlet daily.

The strait is open with strong tidal currents. Rupert Inlet is practically landlocked, they note.

Utah's mill has a capacity of 33,000 tons a day and its effluent is concentrated. Sunro's had a capacity of 1,000 tons a day, and its effluent wasn't nearly so concentrated.

The Annaconda copper mine at Britannia Beach has been dumping tailings at the edge of Howe Sound for about half a century, they add.

The fishing in Howe Sound remains good, so the Sunro men are at a loss to understand objections from commercial fishermen to the Jordan River operation. There would have been residual traces of cyanide in the Sunro tailings but well below official safety levels. Cyanide is used in separating mineral from rock.

Sunro can appeal the PCB's ruling on the permit but the men say the French backers are free now to pull their financing out at any time. The question is: will they wait for an appeal?

Meanwhile, jobs are far from handy for Sunro's former mine workers.

There are only two other mines on Vancouver Island which might be able to hire a handful of the unemployed men. They are Western at Buttle Lake and Benson Lake, about 26 miles northwest of Port McNeill.

MAITLAND
not concerned

Victoria Police Start Work-to-Rule Campaign

Victoria city police have decided to work to rule, but deputy police chief Ray Maitland said today the public has "no cause for alarm."

The decision to stick by the rules was made at a membership meeting of the Victoria Police Union, which is seeking wage parity with Vancouver policemen in a new contract.

Union president Ken Horsman said police "have decided to provide a service according to the rules, which you might call working according to the rules." But he was not prepared to say what this means.

Maitland said "we will have to wait and see what they do" when asked what work to rule means and what effect it will have.

"I am not too concerned," he said. "I am sure they won't shirk their duty."

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, who is also chairman of the police commission which bargains with the union, said "if people are dissatisfied with the wages we pay, they should look for more lucrative fields of employment.

"I have great admiration for our police force. I hope they are reasonable men and they will act as such."

"No matter what their arguments, we can't consider parity with Vancouver."

The mayor also said the executive of the police union "has a job to do, trying to get the best deal for the membership. There are no hard feelings."

Victoria has offered policemen a 7½ per cent pay raise this year, the same as other municipal employees accepted. Police have rejected this, saying it will widen the existing disparity with Vancouver.

Vancouver police were awarded, in a binding arbitration decision, a 15.4 per cent pay raise this year which will increase the pay of a first-class constable to $887 a month by July 1.

Victoria police have said a 7½ per cent raise will widen the $34-a-month gap between the two cities to $194 a month by July 1.

Horsman, in comments Thursday, said police might not expose themselves to unnecessary dangers "as they often do" and legal advice is being sought "in some of the areas suggested by our members."

Horsman said earlier the work to rule situation "could progressively get worse" and that motto is "at a very extreme low, and this is bound to affect their efficiency as police officers."

OPEN LETTER

The Way to End Our Red Ghetto

Miss Kahn-Tineta Horn,
Caughnawaga Indian Reserve,
Montreal, Quebec.

Dear Miss Horn:

As a long-time admirer of your beauty, your bravery and your dedication to the cause of the Canadian Indian, it came as a shock and disillusionment this week to read that you've hardened your position beyond all hope of compromise.

To describe yourself as "a racist," to actively promote the sick philosophy of elective apartheid, even to the extent of proposing separate Indian cities, to defend the position that Indians are mentally, physically and culturally incapable of integration in a white society, seems to me a wildly defeatist, sadly misguided retreat.

It is fortified, God knows, by many a white man who thinks of himself as the best friend the Indian ever had. They are the well-meaning, innocently patronizing birds who nourish the mystique that the noble red man will lose what remains of his identity if he's separated from his heritage, that if he moves or is moved beyond being a barbeque or salmon, a carver of totems, a teller of legends, a bearer of tribal totems, he faces oblivion.

The romantic myth that the Indian today is still motivated by a simplistic, independent, child-like yearning for the freedom of the forest is silly enough coming from a white man. When it comes from an Indian, it's even sillier.

Indian, Kahn-Tineta, when you say that "there are Indians and then there's everyone else," the forest image simply becomes a green ghetto.

You are saying, in effect, to an Indian child that even if this country comes to recognize its shame and begins to do something about it, unlikely though it may be, that child will not aspire to writing the Toronto Symphony or running a surgeon or astronaut or editor or prime minister or chief justice or architect or banker because it is not in his genes. That, indeed, is racism just as vicious as that of the white supremacists of South Africa.

The fact is that any child of any race, white, black, red or police-dotted, given the equal opportunity, has as much chance as a boy or girl of any other race. Just as you, Kahn-Tineta, became a beauty contest winner and an articulate activist for your people, so any Indian child might set his sights on any goal if all things were equal.

That this is so rarely demonstrated in Canada is not to be taken as evidence that Indians are "different" or that they are either inferior or superior in their capabilities or their values.

In this province, for example, there are some 60,000 so-called "non-status" Indians. Nine of every 10 of them are on the welfare rolls. They are not unemployed because they are Indian. They are unemployed because they are human beings who have not had the advantages of education and training.

In our own Victoria area 13 per cent of all children needing foster homes are Indian although the Indian population is something like half of one per cent. The homes these children come from are not broken because they are Indian. They are broken homes because the parents have the empty, confused, oppressed lives of second-class citizens.

Few if any Indians in this part of the world aspire to be surgeons or editors or architects or the rest. Vast numbers of young Indians, in fact, are tragically locked in an iron mask of shyness, lack of self-possession, often all but totally unable to communicate except with their own people. They are not this way because they are Indian. They are this way because of the ghetto life of the reserve, because of an insular family environment, because our educational system makes little or no attempt to overcome their handicaps.

It is intimidation and oppression, in other words, and not any inherent inferiority or "difference" that makes integration into a white society so difficult. Yet without integration the Indian is surely doomed, surely destined to be overwhelmed completely.

It is an integration that could be accomplished in a single generation if Indian children were removed from their stultifying environment and became the subjects of an intensive, highly specialized program to suit their needs. The rich tradition and culture of their race need not be lost in the process any more than the tradition and culture of an Irishman or Jew or Hungarian is lost in taking his rightful place in a progressive society.

You think not, Kahn-Tineta? Then I would advise you to study the Cuban "becado" experiment that began soon after Castro's revolution was consolidated, a crash scholarship program designed to bring the oppressed Cuban negro into that society.

Teams of recruiters from Havana went everywhere in the cities' slums and into the primitive huts of the country, selecting black children on the basis of aptitude tests. They were sent to the capital where, in groups of 20 or 30, they moved into the elegant homes in the Miramar district left empty by the wealthy who had fled to America. The best teachers in Cuba were assigned to the program.

Each of these groups was given an intensive general curriculum, but each specialized in some particular field. One of the most unusual was devoted to ballet. In others there were courses in engineering, motor mechanics, teaching, banking, agriculture, the fine arts, journalism, physical training, many more. The old, beautiful Nacional Hotel became one giant school of young black girls, most of whom had been domestics, studying stenographic and secretarial work.

I saw all this in my first visit to Cuba in Year One of the revolution. When I went back 10 years later I saw black dancers in featured roles in the Cuban National Ballet, black executives in many key positions through the state bureaucracy, blacks in worthwhile, purposeful functions in every conceivable line.

This was the program that United States newspapers were describing as Castro's "kidnapping" of the black children, though, in fact, they returned regularly to their homes and, very often, were educating their illiterate parents.

That, Kahn-Tineta, is how Cuba demonstrated that an "interior" people need only opportunity and equality. Nothing less will work here with the Canadian Indian. The chances for it are remote, I agree, but to close the door irrevocably as you propose is really to abandon all hope.

B.C. Hydro Picket Line Halts Jordan River Work

Striking B.C. Hydro electricians today set up pickets at their Jordan River dam site, halting work on dam and construction projects as about 130 other tradesmen respected the pickets.

The electricians, striking for higher wages, were also out at Prince George, where about 100 line maintenance personnel, communication technicians, servicemen and other staff did not work.

The Jordan River pickets were set up at 6:30 a.m. today, affecting work at the Elliot dam, Jordan River dam and a generating station project. Construction workers were most affected by the pickets.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the union representing the electricians, is conducting a series of rotating strikes to further their pay demands. Negotiations with B.C. Hydro broke off late last week.

Burnaby was the first centre hit, when workers stayed off Wednesday. Workers at Jordan River and Williams Lake stayed off Thursday.

NOT UNION MEN

IBEW president Tom Forkin said today from Vancouver that loggers and truckers at Jordan River, who are not union men, respected the pickets.

He said the workers at Prince George were mainly concerned with maintenance on the power system but would not reveal if the strike would continue at Prince George Monday.

Forkin said the Jordan River electricians would "likely be back at work on Monday."

However, John Hebert, local union spokesman at Jordan River, said he was awaiting further orders from union headquarters.

"At the present time, it's the one-day deal," he said. "But it could very likely run the weekend."

"We're awaiting orders from the other end," he said. B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said Thursday night the spot strikes had not affected service and that no negotiations had been set up between the two parties.

He said the efforts of an independent arbitrator would be futile, as mediator Clark Gilmour, whom he described as "one of the best in the business," had not been able to settle the dispute.

Hydro has offered a 2.75 per cent increase over three years, approximately seven per cent per year.

The union says it lowered its demands to 1 1/2 per cent over two years, or about nine per cent per year.

Shrum said, "My position is perfectly clear. These employees are already the mandarins of our work force, the highest paid of them all."

"They would remain the highest paid with only a modest increase in their contract," he said. "The seven per cent offer would put them still further ahead. That is why we can't afford to give them more than we have given other unions at Hydro in recent negotiations."

Hydro electricians are now paid $5.59 hourly.

ONTARIO Premier William Davis today withdrew his request for discussion of economic problems at the June 14-16 Victoria talks after the federal government agreed to an Ottawa meeting of provincial finance ministers in July to discuss the June 18 budget.

NATO BACKS CANADA IDEA FOR E. EUROPEAN ENVOY

LISBON (CP) — A two-day meeting of NATO foreign ministers ended today with an indication of general support for a Canadian recommendation that a special envoy be appointed to evaluate recent Soviet proposals for mutual East-West force reductions in Europe.

The ministers qualified their support in a communique by stating that such an envoy should be named only if it becomes clear that the move would be effective in clarifying Soviet intentions.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada had hoped for a somewhat more rapid appointment.

The meeting also agreed to a United States call for a special NATO conference of deputy foreign ministers—probably in September—to discuss details of possible talks with the Soviet-led Warsaw pact on force reductions. Ministers expressed the intention to move to negotiations as soon as practicable.

Following exploratory discussions, the communique said, the alliance is prepared to work out the time, place, arrangements and agenda for East-West talks. Sources say the appointment of a special representative to Eastern Europe depends largely on whether this method of consultation would be acceptable to the Russians.

No names had been mentioned in connection with the appointment of an envoy, sources said. Manlio Brosio, retiring NATO secretary-general, has been mentioned unofficially as a possible appointee to the position.

The communique also appears to rule out a European security conference called for by the Soviet Union, until a satisfactory conclusion is reached in four-power talks on Berlin.

This decision follows closely a report on the Berlin situation presented to the meeting.

Immediate Shipping Start

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A new sale of 81,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat to Russia for approximately $145 million was announced today.

In addition, Russia will take another 38,400,000 bushels under terms of the 1966 contract and an option to buy 10 million more bushels in 1972.

The whole package is up to 130 million bushels for a maximum $235 million.

Canadian and Soviet representatives signed a contract in the Senate reading room.

Immigration Minister Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, announced the contract in the Commons soon after the signing.

Delivery of the wheat will begin this month and continue through 1972. The major portion will be shipped during the rest of this year and the early part of next.

Mr. Lang and Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said in a joint statement that the sale involves two contracts.

The first is for 38,400,000 bushels to complete the outstanding purchase obligation under the 1966 Canada-Russia wheat agreement.

The second covers 81,500,000 bushels, an additional sale.

Of the total, 550,000 tons will be shipped in the form of flour.

The first contract amount will be shipped this year, the second—this year and next.

OPTION TO BUY MORE

Russia has the option to purchase a further 250,000 metric tons for shipment during May-July next year.

Shipments will be made from both Pacific and Eastern ports. Russia will have the option of taking some of the shipments through Churchill, Man., during the 1971 navigation season.

The sale of the 81.5 million bushels is considerably less than other sales to Russia in the past, the biggest being the 1963 Canada-Russia pact for 487 million bushels.

COMPLETES 1966 PACT

Then in 1966, Russia contracted to buy 330 million bushels during a three-year period. At the end of three years 128 million bushels remained to be bought under the agreement.

On Dec. 15, 1969, the Russians agreed to buy the remaining 128 million bushels—worth about $200 million at the time.

Mr. Lang said then that about 75 million would be delivered before the end of 1970 with the remaining 53 million to be delivered before the end of 1971.

CASE OF BEER MAY COST $3.15

If B.C. breweries have their way, the province's beer drinkers could be hit by another 25-cent a case increase on top of the recently announced 20-cent a case government increase.

This would put the price of beer at $3.15 a case.

Don McDougall, vice-president of Labatt's B.C. Ltd., said Thursday that the breweries were disappointed not to receive any of this week's 20-cent government increase.

He said Labatt's is reviewing its whole pricing system, adding that the breweries have been able to keep their prices down by increasing plant efficiency.

"I don't think we can do this much longer," he said.

Prince George brewer Ben Ginter said Thursday the major brewers have approached him about a price hike. "They have been feeling me out to know if I'd go along with a price increase," he said.

Spokesmen for Carlings and Canadian breweries also said prices are being reviewed by their companies but no application has yet been made to the B.C. Liquor Control Board for an increase.

Ginter said brewers are giving greatly increased labor costs as the reason for wanting the price increase.

U.S. Jobless Total For May Hits 6.2%

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Unemployment in the United States rose to 6.2 per cent last month, matching last December's nine-year high.

It compared with 6.1 per cent in April and left 4,394,000 persons out of jobs, compared with 3,384,000 for the same period a year ago.

Since December the jobless level has fluctuated between 5.8 per cent and 6.2 per cent, but the trend has been upwards for the last three months.

THREE CARS DROP INTO CREVICE; 2 DEAD

LYTTON (CP) — A man and woman were killed and five persons injured today when three cars dropped into a 40-foot crevice on Highway 12, nine miles east of Lillooet. No names were released.

An RCMP spokesman said the cars apparently drove into the crevice after 150 feet of roadway gave way and slid down an embankment. The third car involved was an RCMP cruiser.

The spokesman said the policeman escaped injury and the other injuries were not serious.

Nixon To Free Oil Flow

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon said today the United States is "prepared to move promptly to permit Canadian crude oil" to enter the U.S. on an unlimited basis. But there appeared to be some strings attached to the idea.

Putting the presidential seal of approval on some form of continental policy, the president said "the time has come to develop further this mutually advantageous trading relationship" in energy.

To some observers the suggestion seemed, as one put it, "the same old story" although it now has been given the prestige of presidential endorsement. Canadian officials have shied away from the continental energy idea under which there would be a virtually unlimited across-the-border exchange of energy from many sources.

READY TO PROCEED

Referring to the "mutually advantageous trading relationship" in energy, the president added:

"The United States is therefore prepared to move promptly to permit Canadian crude oil to enter this country free of any quantitative restraints, upon agreement as to measures needed to prevent citizens of both our countries from being subjected to oil shortages, or threats of shortages. We are ready to proceed with negotiations and we look to an early conclusion."

Although Nixon did not mention the continental concept, administration officials made it clear they were talking beyond mere oil imports.
